ROYAL NATIONAL DIRECTORY OFFICE, 37 LOWER KING STREET, MANCHESTER.

HAMILTON,

WITH THE PARISHES OF BOTHWELL AND DALSERF, AND THE VILLAGES OF LARKHALL, QUARTER, UDDINGSTON AND FALLSIDE.

HAMILTON is an ancient town, royal burgh, and the capital of the parish of its name and of the middle ward of the county; 37 miles w. by s. from Edinburgh, 10½ s.s.e. from Glasgow, 15 n.w. from Lanark, 8 s. from Airdrie, and 7 n. from Strathaven; it occupies an eligible site on the road betwixt Glasgow and Carlisle, and Edinburgh and Ayr, and a pleasant situation in a highly cultivated county, washed by the Clyde and the Avon. The town lies along the base of a rising ground, extending nearly a mile in length, and consists of several streets of substantial, well built houses, not very regularly disposed, but handsome in appearance, and the whole town has an air of comfort, respectability and activity. Of late years many improvements have been effected in the town and neighbourhood, and it is rapidly increasing in population and importance. A line of street has been opened through the town, forming part of the London road; a bridge called Cadzow bridge, has been thrown across the ravine, thereby avoiding the lower part of the old town, and a railway has been laid down from Glasgow, which has proved the means of opening the vast mineral field in the neighbourhood of Hamilton. Among the public buildings will be recognised the handsome Town Hall, in form of a Roman temple, with appropriate offices and a gaol. The town is well lighted with gas by a company, and there are works for supplying the inhabitants with water. The moderate distance of Hamilton from Glasgow has facilitated the introduction of weaving cotton goods to a large amount; the lace trade is carried on to a considerable extent, and the prosperity of this business has been greatly augmented by improvements. There are six banking establishments prosperously settled in this burgh, viz., branches respectively of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the City of Glasgow Bank, the British Linen Company, the Commercial Bank of Scotland and the Clydesdale Banking Co. In the fifteenth century Lord Hamilton erected the town into a burgh of barony. Queen Mary created it into a royal burgh in 1548, but after the reformation the rights and privileges thus acquired from the Crown were resigned into the hands of William, Duke of Hamilton, who in 1670 restored to the community its former franchises, and erected it into a burgh of regality dependent on him and his successors. The government of the burgh is invested in a provost, three bailies, and nine councillors; and in connection with Lanark, Airdrie, Falkirk and Linlithgow, it sends a representative to parliament. The justices of peace hold regular courts for the trial of minor offences. The places of worship are churches of the Establishment, Free, United Presbyterian and Episcopal churches, and Independent and Roman Catholic chapels. The old parish church was made collegiate in 1451, by Sir James Hamilton, for a provost and prebendary, and has always been the place of sepulture of that family. The great objects of attraction in this part of Lanarkshire are the palace of the Duke of Hamilton and its surrounding pleasure grounds. The building forms three sides of a quadrangle; the rooms are spacious, particularly the picture gallery, which contains the finest collection in Scotland. In the middle of the great park one mile from the town, on a rock overhanging the Avon, stands the ruins of Cadzow Castle, the ancient manor house. The park is well stocked with deer, and bears a number of stately oaks. Amongst the charitable institutions of Hamilton are two hospitals for the reception of a certain number of old men, one endowed by the noble family above mentioned, the other by a Mr. James Robertson; there are likewise an orphan school, some friendly societies and a masonic lodge. In the vicinity, to the west of the town, on the road to Bothwell, are spacious and handsome barracks, and on the banks of the Clyde is an extensive racecourse, on which horse races occasionally take place, and the meetings are noted as among the best attended in Scotland. The parish of Hamilton, which embraces 14,243 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 16,808; the parliamentary burgh contained 11,299 inhabitants. QUARTER is a small village in Hamilton parish, two miles distant from that town. The weekly market for Hamilton is held on Friday. The hiring and cattle markets are held on the third Friday in April and the third Friday in October; and the annual cattle show about the beginning of June. Population about 14,000.

BOTHWELL is an ancient village, in the parish of its name, situate on the road from Glasgow to Hamilton, between eight and nine miles from the former and between two and three from the latter town. The parish is about eight miles and a half long by four broad; the great roads from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and from Glasgow to Carlisle, pass through it; and beside the river Clyde, it is intersected by the two Calders, which are beautifully skirted with wood. Throughout the parish coal is found in abundance, and several collieries are in full operation. Near the village, towards the west, on the side of the Clyde, is the modern mansion of the late Lord Douglas, now in possession of the Countess of Home, standing in the midst of shrubberies and plantations; contiguous to which, on an eminence, is the magnificent ruin of Bothwell Castle, once an important Scottish fortress, much admired by all visitors. The road to Hamilton is carried over the Clyde by means of Bothwell bridge, a name famous in Scottish history from this being the spot on which the Duke of Monmouth routed a formidable army of covenanters, on the 22nd of June, 1679. The ancient church of Bothwell was founded by Archibald "the Grim," Earl of Douglas, in 1398, with liberal endowment for a provost and eight prebendaries. An elegant church was erected by the heritors of this parish; it is in the Gothic style, and exhibits a fine appearance as seen on approaching the village from Hamilton. There is a branch of the City of Glasgow Banking Company here, and a board school and private academies. The area of Bothwell parish is 13,644 acres, and its population in 1871 was 19,292; the village at the same period contained 1,209.

DALSERF is a parish in the middle ward of Lanarkshire, on the west bank of the Clyde; its greatest length is 6½ miles, and its greatest breadth 4½. The soil is generally fertile and well-cultivated, and coal is found in abundance. The only village deserving notice in the parish is LARKHALL, three miles from Hamilton, on the great road from Glasgow to Carlisle. In this village many looms are employed in the weaving of fancy fabrics for Glasgow houses; and the large bleach works of David Crawford Miller are situated here, giving employment to a large number of hands; altogether the parish has every appearance of prosperity. Dalserf parish embraces 6,956 acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 7,341.

UDDINGSTON is a thriving village in the parish of Bothwell, four miles north-west from Hamilton. The road from Glasgow to Carlisle passes through the village; and it has a station on the Caledonian Railway. There are iron foundries and establishments for the manufacture of agricultural implements, of which that of Messrs. J. Wilkie & Co. stands pre-eminent. The village is lighted with gas, and presents an appearance of neatness and good order. The places of worship are Established, Free and United Presbyterian Churches, one of each. There are also two public and two private schools, and a branch of the Bank of Scotland. Population of Uddingston in 1871, 1,997.

FALLSIDE is a hamlet in the parish of Bothwell, about one mile north-east from and in the postal district of Bothwell village, and has a station on the Caledonian Railway.

HOLYTOWN,

BELLSHILL, GREENHILL, MOSSEND, NEWHOUSE, NEW STEVENSTON, SALSBURG, TILLINGBURN, SHOTTS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HOLYTOWN is an extensive village, and quoad sacra parish, disjoined and formed into a separate ecclesiastical district, though still rated in the parish of Bothwell for parochial purposes; it is also in the middle ward of Lanarkshire, and ten miles east from Glasgow. The village derives its chief support from the extensive collieries in the neighbourhood, and the Mossend Iron Company's and the Clydesdale Iron Company's Works, which give employment to a large number of persons. There are places of worship of the Establishment, and also a Board school. A station on the Caledonian Railway is within half a mile of the village. Population in 1871, 2,197.

BELLSHILL is a large village in the parish of Bothwell, one mile west from Holytown, on the through road to Glasgow. Like Holytown, its chief support is derived from collieries in the vicinity. The United Presbyterians and Evangelical Unionists have places of worship. Population in 1871, 2,233.

NEWHOUSE is a hamlet two miles east from Holytown.

GREENHILL is a small village about four miles east from Holytown and one from Bellside station. There are extensive collieries in the neighbourhood, and half a mile distant are the extensive quarries of Messrs. Gibb, M'Intyre & Ancell. There is also a Board school.

SALSBURG, Sallysburgh or Salzburgh is a village in the parish of SHOTTS, five miles east and in the postal district of Holytown. The Original Secessionists have a place of worship here. Population in 1871, 553.

TILLINGBURN is a hamlet near to the village of Greenhill, and about four miles east from Holytown and two miles from Bellside station, on the Cleland and Mid-Calder branch of the Caledonian Railway. There is a probability of the mineral and goods line from Bellside to Salsburg being opened for passenger traffic at an early date. The works of James Munro, Esq., artificial manure and agricultural implement maker, are situated in this hamlet.

The parish of SHOTTS lies in the north-east corner of the county, and is fourteen miles in length by about ten in breadth, bounded by New Monkland on the north, Bothwell on the west, Cambusnethan on the south, and the county of Linlithgow on the east; the Amon and the Avon have their sources within the district, which is likewise watered by the streams of the North and South Calder, running through the extensive reservoir and Lilly Loch, which supplies the Forth and Clyde canal, as likewise several mills. The parish abounds in coal and limestone. The church stands on the south road between Edinburgh and Glasgow, on a bare and elevated part of the district, fifteen miles from Glasgow and twenty-seven from Edinburgh. There is a school here, erected by the late Mr. Wilson, of Whitburn, which is now under the School Board. Acreage of the parish, 24,944; population in 1871, 8,353.

POST OFFICE, HOLYTOWN, Jennie Rodger, Post Mistress,—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow and Motherwell) at ..een minutes past seven morning; from all parts (from Glasgow) at half-past five evening; and are despatched to all parts (by Glas-w) at ten minutes past six and ten minutes past ten morning, and to Glasgow and Motherwell at half-past four evening.

KILBRIDE (EAST),

CARMUNNOCK AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KILBRIDE is a market village and burgh of barony in the parish of its name, situate on the road from Glasgow to Muirkirk, eight miles from the former city, the like distance N. from Strathaven, between 6 and 7 s.w. from Hamilton, and 45 w. by s. from Edinburgh. The parish, which comprehends the abrogated one of Torrance, contains some extensive limeworks, and coal also lies beneath the surface. The places of worship are the parish kirk, the United Presbyterian church, and the Free kirk. Kilbride has produced several eminent men, among whom are found Dr. William Hunter, and his brother, Mr. John Hunter, the celebrated anatomist and physiologist. There are two good schools—the Board school in Kilbride, and one at Maxwelton, a short distance from the town, the latter being endowed by the late Sir Hugh Maxwell, Baronet, of Calderwood Castle. A market is entitled to be holden here on Monday. The cattle show, which is held on the second Friday in June for Clydesdale horses and Ayrshire cattle, is the only fair that takes place in East Kilbride. East Kilbride parish, which embraces 22,760 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 3,861.

The parish of CARMUNNOCK lies on the north-western confines of the county, on the east bank of the White Cart river, having Kilbride on the south and Cambuslang on the east; it is four miles in length by three in breadth. The ground is partly arable and partly pastoral, the banks of the Cart presenting some fine woodland scenery. On the estate of Castlemilk (the proprietors of which are supposed to be lineal descendants of the Royal House of Stuart), are the remains of a Roman military road; and many tumuli have been met with, which when opened have always been found to contain human bones and instruments of war. In the house of Castlemilk, which is noted for its fine situation, Mary Queen of Scots is said to have lodged the night before the battle of Langside. There is a place of worship for the members of the Established Church and a Board school. The parish supports its own poor by voluntary assessment; acreage, 3,479; population of the parish in 1871, 702.

POST OFFICE, EAST KILBRIDE, Hannah Reid, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from all parts (from Glasgow) at thirty-five minutes past eight and thirty-five minutes past eleven morning, and fifty minutes past five evening, and are despatched thereto at five minutes past eight and twenty minutes past eleven morning, and twenty-five minutes past five evening.

LANARK,

WITH NEW LANARK, KIRKFIELD BANK, THE PARISH OF CARMICHAEL AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LANARK is a royal burgh, market town, the capital of the county and parish to which it gives name, and the seat of a presbytery; 32 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 25 S.E. from Glasgow, 15 S.E. from Hamilton, and 11 N.W. from Biggar; situate on the main road from Stirling to Carlisle, and one mile above the left or east bank of the Clyde, and from whence there is a branch of the Caledonian railway, communicating with the main line at Carstairs Junction. It is a place of great antiquity, and is the spot where the first assembly of Parliament mentioned in the history of Scotland was convened by Kenneth III. in the year 978. It is said to have received its original charter from Alexander I., and it is certain that it was a royal town as early at least as Malcolm IV. Many of the ancient Scottish kings made Lanark, or Lanerk, their residence; and at one period there stood a castle on an apparently artificial mound at the botton of the present Castlegate, the summit of which elevation is now converted into a bowling-green. Lanark possesses interest as having been the scene of the first decisive military enterprise of the celebrated Sir William Wallace, that patriot having commenced his glorious though personally unfortunate career by the defeat and death of William de Heselrig, the English sheriff of Lanarkshire, in 1293. We are told that Wallace having married a lady of the name of Braidfoot, the heiress of Lamington, resided with her privately at Lanark: that while there, he, with a few friends, had a quarrel and conflict with some officers of the English garrison. The party of Wallace being overpowered by numbers, he made his escape to Cartlane Craig, on which the sheriff siezed on his wife and put her to death. To revenge this barbarous atrocity Wallace and his friends attacked the sheriff in the night, and massacred him with two hundred and forty Englishmen. Bruce finally recovered Lanark from English rule in 1310. The present town is principally composed of one line of streets, descending from east to west, bearing the respective names of High street, Bloomgate, Westport and Hope street; the latter, leading northwards, contains the County Buildings; besides these, there are smaller streets diverging, and several lanes and closes. The main line contains many good stone buildings of respectable appearance, and well furnished shops, the whole being suitably lighted with gas by the Lanark Gas Consumers' Co. Limited. The general occupation of the inhabitants is hand-loom weaving for the Glasgow manufacturers; nail making is carried on to some extent. There are also two breweries, four branch banks and several good inns. There are also barracks for the county militia. Within a short distance of the town the North British Oil and Candle Co. Limited have in full operation works for distilling and refining paraffin oil, and the manufacture of candles, grease, &c.; and close by the railway station is the fancy wood work establishment of Messrs. Archibald Brown & Co., where a great variety of fancy articles are manufactured from wood, and tastefully ornamented in tartan and various other patterns. This business was established here in 1866, and gives employment to about 100 hands; admission to see the works may be had by the kind permission of the proprietors. Behind the Clydesdale Hotel are the Assembly Rooms, erected in 1827, on the site of which stood an ancient monastery of Franciscans. The County Buildings, erected in 1836 at an expense of upwards of £5,000, are situated in Hope street, and are a great ornament to, that part of the town; they are in the Grecian style of architecture with a noble front of freestone, and comprise commodious court rooms and appropriate offices. The gaol is situated at the rear of the court house. As a royal burgh, whose charters were finally confirmed by Charles I. in 1632, it is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and nine councillors; it unites with Falkirk, Hamilton, Linlithgow and Airdrie in returning one member to parliament. The sheriff's court is held in the County Buildings every Tuesday and Friday during the session, a justice of peace court and one for the burgh as required, and general county meetings take place in the same edifice on the last day of April and the 29th of September. The places of worship consist of the parish church, which stands in the centre of the main street, and a quoad sacra church at St. Leonards, a Church of England in Hope street, two for United Presbyterians, a Free church and a Roman Catholic chapel. In a niche over the eastern door of the parish church is placed a collossal statue of Wallace, executed and presented to the town by Forrest, a self-taught genius. The remains of the old parish church, which are situated at a distance of half a mile from the town, have been deserted for more than eighty years; tradition asserts that in this structure, at public worship, the heroic Wallace first saw his subsequently murdered wife. In the cemetery which surrounds the church was interred William Lithgow, a celebrated and eccentric traveller of the reign of James VI.; after his peregrination through a great portion of Europe and Asia, he came home miserably mutilated and disfigured by the inquisition, and settled in his native parish till his death. The principal educational institutions are the Grammar School, supported by the corporation; Wilson's Free School, endowed by a lady of that name, in the year 1818, for the education of twenty-five boys, and the like number of girls; and the Broomgate Educational Institution. Lanark has ever possessed considerable attractions to the visitor and the tourist, from the beautiful undulating scenery and the romantic grounds at Bonnington, and the Falls of Clyde: these are the Falls of Corra, where the water takes three distinct leaps, making altogether eighty-four feet; Bonnington fall, a little further on, and a third at Stonebyres, about two miles below the town. About a mile to the north of the town is a very old arch, supposed to have been erected either by the Picts or the Romans. A fine view of Cartlane bridge, erected in 1822, is obtained here, and Cartlane Crags, a deep and rugged chasm, evidently formed by a convulsion of nature, will be an interesting object to the visitor. The neighbourhood of Lanark is adorned with many mansions of the nobility and gentry; and at Lee Castle, the seat of Sir Simon M'Donald Lockhart, Bart. who is the principal land owner in the parish, is to be seen the curious stone called the "Lee Penny," which is said to have suggested to the late Sir Walter Scott the idea of his celebrated novel, the "Talisman." Horse races are now held on an extensive and excellent course, about a mile and a half east of the town. In the vicinity is a handsome sheet of water or loch, from which the town is supplied with water by means of a pumping engine, its margins have been embanked and planted, and an excellent footway formed close by the water's edge, rendering it an attractive and delightful promenade, much frequented by the inhabitants. The market day is Tuesday; fairs, the last Wednesda of April, May and July (old style), the Thursday after the second Monday of October, and the first Wednesday of November (old style), all for cattle and horses, and lambs in the season. The population of the parish, the area of which is 10,385 statute acres, was in 1871, 7,841, and that of the burgh, 5,099. The parish is in the southern division of the county, which sends one member to parliament, the present representative being Sir Windham C. J. C. Anstruther, Bart. of Carmichael House.

NEW LANARK is a very neat, regular, and well-built village, about one mile south from Lanark, on the same side of the Clyde as that town. It was founded by Mr. Dale, in 1705, that gentleman having erected the first of the present range of cotton mills, and constructed a subterraneous aqueduct, about one hundred yards in length, through the solid rock, by which means he brought the waters of the Clyde on the sloping plain in which the mills and the village now stand. The "Institution," as it is called, is the school for the whole village, where the inhabitants send their children from the age of three to the age of thirteen. The late great (and by many considered mistaken) philanthropist, Owen, was long a principal proprietor of these extensive mills; he made great efforts nd sacrifices for the good of his workpeople, and it is to him that he inhabitants owe their present educational institution, which, in effect and results, as regards the morals of this community, have worked admirably. The factories of New Lanark, and its instructive establishment, are now objects of curiosity to all tourists; and indeed strangers would deprive themselves of much gratification if they left this part of the country without paying them a visit. The population of the village was in 1871, 973.

KIRKFIELD BANK is a handsome village in the parish of Lesmahagow, situated on the left bank of the Clyde, about a mile and a half from Lanark. The principal occupation of the inhabitants is handloom weaving. A steam loom factory is also in operation, and employs a number of hands. The scenery in this part of the neighbourhood is very romantic, and frequented by many visitors. There is an Established Church and a board school in the village. Population in 1871, 963.

CARMICHAEL is a parish about four miles south of Lanark, with a population in 1871 of 708. The principal landowners are the Countess of Home, Sir Windham C. J. C. Anstruther, Bart. M.P. and Morris T. Carmichael, Esq. There is a church and board school in the parish. Acreage of the parish, 11,314.

LEADHILLS,

CRAWFORD, CRAWFORD-JOHN AND ABINGTON.

LEADHILLS is a village in the parish of Crawford 46 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 44 S. from Glasgow, 15 from Douglas, and 16 N. from Thornhill, situate in the alpine region, amidst a wilderness of dismal, heathy mountains, on the road from Glasgow to Dumfries. It derives its name from being the residence of workmen employed in the lead mines, which are the most valuable in Scotland, and perhaps in Britain. The mines, which are farmed by a company from the Earl of Hopetoun, have produced in some years 13,000 bars, at nine stone (avoirdupois) the bar; in the year 1809, 25,200 bars were produced, which at £32 per ton (the then price) amounted to £45,360; the ore dug from these mines affords a very liberal proportion of silver. Gold was found in the sand of the mountains at an early period; during the reign of James VI. of Scotland, Sir Bevis Bulmer, a German, by order of Queen Elizabeth, was sent to collect gold dust in the waters of Elvin and Glengonar, with which they were said to abound; he had a house at Wanlochhead, where he deposited the fruits of his labour. The attempt was revived by the late Lord Hopetoun, but soon discontinued, as the product was inadequate to the expense It was at Leadhills that Allan Ramsay, the poet, was born and spent his earliest years. In the village is a good inn, "The Hopetoun Arms." Fairs are held on the second Friday of June and the last Friday of October. In 1871 the village contained 1,033 inhabitants.

CRAWFORD is a small village in the parish of its name, 8 miles from Leadhills, situate on the main road between Glasgow and Carlisle; it contains a good inn and the parish church, which latter was enlarged and improved in 1836. The name is said to be derived from the British compound Craw-ford, signifying the "passage" or the "road of blood;" an appellation supposed to have been obtained from this locality having been the scene of some bloody contest between the people of the country and their Roman invaders. The parish embraces an area of 65,407 acres, and in 1871 had a population numbering 1,829.

CRAWFORD-JOHN is a parish in the upper part of Clydesdale, contiguous to the foregoing parish, and on the east of Muirkirk and Douglas. The small river named Duneaton Water takes its rise at the head of this district. On the top of Netherton Hill, are the vestiges of an extensive encampment, and in other parts of the parish are the ruins of two ancient castles. The village, which is small, is situated about a mile and a half south-west of the main road, and about six miles north of Leadhills; with the exception of the parish church and school, it contains little worthy of notice; but the country around is rich in beautiful, bold, and varied scenery, with lofty hills and flowing streams. In the village are two respectable inns, the "Crown" and the "Colebrooke Arms," and there is also a good library. The acreage of the parish is 26,357, and its population was, in 1871, 853.

ABINGTON is a small village of Crawford-John, from which place is six miles distant; the only thing worthy of notice here is "Abington House," the residence of Sir Thomas Edward Colebrooke, M.P.; there is a good inn, and a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland.

ABBEY GREEN, KIRKFIELD BANK, CROSSFORD, KIRKMUIRHILL, BLACKWOOD, BOGHEAD, AUCHENHEATH, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LESMAHAGOW is a parish, the village called ABBEY GREEN being situated on the river Nethan, one of the tributaries of the Clyde, and in the upper ward of Lanarkshire. It is a beautiful village, in almost the centre of the parish, 38 miles W. from Edinburgh, 23 S.E. from Glasgow, and 6 S.W. from Lanark. It takes its name from the old abbey, taken down at the beginning of the present century, and an Established Church was erected on its site by the heritors of the parish in 1803. The old abbey was founded by David I. in the year 1140, and dedicated by him to St Machute. An annual fair was formerly held on the 15th of November, at Abbey Green, entitled St. Machute's Fair, but this is now discontinued. The parish of Lesmahagow is very extensive, being twelve miles square, and is one of the richest in minerals in Scotland. The gas coal at AUCHENHEATH, which has been worked for upwards of one hundred years, is well known, and shipped in large quantities. Ironstone, limestone, and freestone are also worked in abundance. In obtaining and working these minerals a considerable number of the inhabitants find employment; whilst many other are occupied in weaving for Glasgow manufacturers. The transit of the minerals is facilitated by means of a railway, which, south of Lesmahagow, is for mineral traffic only; it passes through, or near most of the mines, and joins the Caledonian line at Motherwell. The City of Glasgow Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here. Abbey Green village contains three comfortable inns, the "Abbey Green," the "Commercial," and the "Masons' Arms," all of which are posting houses. Besides the parish church, there is a Free church and a Reformed Presbyterian chapel, and some well-conducted schools.

The noble ruins of Craig Nethan, or Dauphane Castle, the property of Lady Lucy Elizabeth Douglas, of Douglas (Countess of Home), are well deserving the notice of the tourist. A room is still shown, where, it is said, the unfortunate Queen Mary took refuge after her escape from Lochlen Castle. There are two hiring fairs held, and two others for general business, during the year. In the month of December are three market days, known as Big Wednesdays. The parish of Lesmahagow embraces an area of 41,299 statute acres, and contained in 1871 a population of 8,709.

KIRKFIELD BANK is a village in Lesmahagow parish, about five miles east from that village, and one mile west from Lanark, situated on the high road to Glasgow. The Clyde is crossed at this place by a fine stone bridge erected by subscription. A handsome church, in connection with the Established Church of Scotland, was opened July 7th, 1872. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in hand-loom weaving. In the vacinity is the far-famed cataract of Stonebyres, which, like Corra, consists of three leaps, altogether eighty-two feet high. At a short distance is Stonebyres House, enclosed in woods, the property of Mr. William Scott. The original fabric of this building has been nearly all replaced by a most elegant and enlarged erection. The house is approached by a pretty stone bridge, under which flowes a small rivulet, and the gardens are in the highest state of cultivation. Population in 1871, 963.

CROSSFORD is a village situated in a beautiful valley on the left bank of the river Clyde, near the confluence of the Nethan and that river. It is about 5 miles N. by E. from Abbey Green, and 4½ miles N.W. from Lanark. There is a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, and a public school.

KIRKMUIRHILL and BLACKWOOD are villages adjacent to each other, about three miles N.W. from Abbey Green, on the Glasgow road. There is a commodious public school and railway station at the latter place, and a United Presbyterian church at the former. BOGHEAD is a small village about 1½ mile distant from Kirkmuirhill. AUCHENHEATH, a mining village and a railway station, is about 2½ miles north from Abbey Green. Population in 1871: Crossford, 543; Kirkmuirhill, 501; Auchenheath, 768.

MOTHERWELL,

CRAIGNEUK, CARFIN, NEWARTHILL, OMOA, AND CLELAND.

MOTHERWELL is a police burgh and post town, situated for the greater part in the parish of Dalziel, and middle ward of Lanarkshire, two miles from Hamilton, and eleven from Glasgow. Within the recollection of persons still living, Motherwell had no existence as a village. Its name is derived from three farms, called respectively High, Low, and North Motherwell, and these doubtless receive their designation from an adjoining spring called Ladywell or Motherswell. Within the last few years the progress of Motherwell has been very rapid. It owes its prosperity in a great extent to the coal mines in its neighbourhood. The Glasgow Iron Company's works, the largest in Scotland, employ 1,000 workmen. There are four places of worship—the Parish church of Dalziel, a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, and a Primitive Methodist chapel. There are also branches of the Bank of Scotland, and the City of Glasgow Banking Company. The town is supplied with water from the Clyde, and the streets are lighted with gas. Motherwell is a principal station and junction on the Caledonian Railway. In 1871 the parish of Dalziel contained a population of 9,175, of which number Motherwell had 6,943.

CARFIN is a small village in the parish of Bothwell, one mile distant from and in the post delivery of Motherwell. Population in 1871, 111.

NEWARTHILL is a village also in the parish of Bothwell, postal delivery of Motherwell, about two miles and a half distant. The United Presbyterians have a place of worship here. Population in 1871, 1,530.

OMOA is a village in the parish of Shotts, and postal delivery of Motherwell, about three miles distant therefrom. Here are the extensive collieries of the Omoa and Cleland Iron and Coal Co. Limited.

CLELAND is a large village in the parish of Shotts, and postal delivery of Motherwell, from which place it is three and a half miles distant. There is a Free church and a Board school here. Population in 1871, 819.

RUTHERGLEN,

OR RUGLEN, as it is commonly called, is an ancient royal burgh in the parish of its name, situate on the line of the Clydesdale Junction Railway, two miles and a half south-east from Glasgow, and nine west from Hamilton. The town consists of one principal street with several smaller ones branching from it; in its vicinity collieries are wrought, and chemical and dye works are in operation. There are a few large factories, a paper mill, a pottery, tube works, and a boat building yard, which give employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The town is lighted with gas. The places of worship are an Established church, a Quoad Sacra church, a United Presbyterian church, two Free churches, a Roman Catholic chapel, and one for the Wesleyan Methodists; there are also several excellent schools, and an extensive circulating library. The Town Hall, erected in Main street, at a cost of nearly seven thousand pounds, is a handsome and spacious structure, with a large square tower faced with three clocks. This fine building can be seen at a great distance, and adds very much to the appearance of the town. Rutherglen was erected into a royal burgh in the year 1126, by King David I.; by his charter the inhabitants enjoyed many privileges. At that period, small crafts came up the Clyde to Rutherglen quay. Glasgow, however, by its superior consequence, arising from its trade and manufactures, absorbed the privileges and engrossed the traffic of this burgh, and the Broomielaw has for years been the station of almost all external commerce. The castle of Rutherglen (which stood in Castle street, but of which not a trace now remains) underwent several sieges during the wars of King Robert, and it remained a place of strength until the battle of Langside, soon after which the Regent Murray, to revenge himself on the Hamilton family, in whose custody it then was, ordered it to be destroyed. It was in the old church of Rutherglen, that, in the year 1297, Sir John Monteith engaged to betray to the English his friend and companion, Sir William Wallace. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and fifteen councillors; a monthly court is held; it unites with Dumbarton, Kilmarnock, Port Glasgow and Renfrew in sending a representative to the legislature. Kilmarnock is the returning burgh. Rutherglen gives the title of earl to the Marquis of Queensferry. The fairs of this town have been noted for a great show of horses, particularly of the Lanarkshire breed, esteemed the best for draught in Scotland; they are held on the first Friday after the fourth of May; first Tuesday after the fourth of June, and first Friday after the twenty-fifth of August; first Wednesday and Friday and the Friday after the twenty-fifth of November. The parish of Rutherglen, which covers an area of 2,151 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 10,766, the royal burgh at the same time being 9,233.

POST OFFICE, 131 Main st. RUTHERGLEN, Lewis Mitchell, Post Master—Letters arrive from all parts (from Glasgow) at ten minutes before seven and fifteen minutes past nine morning and half-past four afternoon; and are despatched thereto at nine morning, twenty minutes past one, and twenty minutes past four and a quarter to eight evening, and to England and the South at five evening.

STRATHAVEN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF GLASSFORD AND STONEHOUSE, AND THE VILLAGES OF WEST QUARTER & CHAPELTON.

STRATHAVEN is a market town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Avondale; 44 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 15 S. by E. from Glasgow, 28 N.E. from Ayr, 21 E. by N. from Kilmarnock, 14 W. from Lanark, and 7½ from Hamilton; situate on the river Avon. The town is of considerable antiquity, but possesses no pretensions to elegance in its dwellings, or uniformity in the arrangement of them. Like many other towns, not only in the British islands but throughout the European continent, it seems to have been indebted for its origin to the feudal era, when every chieftain had his castle or fortress, for safety or aggression: the ruins of one of these frowning edifices, presenting "shattered and haggard walls," stand on an eminence to the south, overhanging Strathaven. The excellent breed of horses, for which Lanarkshire is so much distinguished, was introduced to this vicinity upwards of a century ago, by a Duke of Hamilton, who brought some fine horses from Holstein, and placed them in the parks attached to the castle; from this origin, the race of draught cattle was propagated over the entire district. The offspring of the cow has also conferred distinction on this town. The herbage of the neighbourhood is supposed to be of a highly nutritious quality, and peculiarly adapted for the improvement of the flesh and milk of cattle; in consequence of this, Strathaven veal has long been held in high estimation, and a Strathaven calf is not unfrequently sold at almost as high a price as a cow reared on a less favoured pasture. Strathaven is not a place of much trade; the most prominent branches are cheese and grain dealing, and the weaving of silk and cotton goods; there are two or three respectable inns and posting houses, and three branch banking establishments. The town was erected into a burgh of barony in the year 1450, in favour of the then powerful chief, William, Earl of Douglas, and is governed by a baron baillie. Besides the National church, there are three United Presbyterian churches, a Free church, a United Associate Synod meeting-house, and a chapel for Independents. A well built and commodious school has been built by the School Board. On the south side of the river Avon, a Roman road can be distinctly traced for several miles. The market, which is held on Thursday, is well attended; fairs are held on the first Thursdays in January, March, and April for cattle and hiring servants; Thursday in Whitsun week, the last Thursday in June, and the second Thursday in August, and (the old fair) on the second of November. The parish of Avondale embraces an area of 37,533 statute acres. In 1871 the town of Strathaven had a population of 3,645.

GLASSFORD is a parish of 6,442 acres, in the middle ward of Lanarkshire, situate on the road between Kilbride and Strathaven. There are two villages in the parish named WEST QUARTER and CHAPELTON; at the former is the parish church and school, and at the latter a Free church and school and an Established church. Population in 1871, 1,480.

STONEHOUSE is a parish and village in the middle ward of Lanarkshire, situate on the south bank of the Avon, eight miles south-east from Hamilton. The inhabitants of the village are mostly engaged in hand-loom weaving for the Glasgow manufacturers, and mining. There are places of worship for members of the Establishment, the Free and the United Presbyterian churches. The village contains three schools, which are well attended. Acreage of the parish, 6,241; population in 1871, 3,177.

WISHAW,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BONKLE, CAMBUSNETHAN, CHAPEL, DYKEHEAD, MORNINGSIDE, NEW MAINS, OVERTOWN, STANE, WATERLOO AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WISHAW is a police burgh, and an endowed parish in the middle ward of Lanarkshire, 15 miles S.E. from Glasgow, and 32 miles W. from Edinburgh. Wishaw formerly formed part of the parish of Cambusnethan, from which it has been disjointed as an ecclesiastical division, though it still forms part of the parish for parochial purposes. It was made a burgh under the Scotch Police Act of 1850, and is governed under that act by three magistrates and nine commissioners. It has recently been extended, and now includes within its limits the village of CAMBUSNETHAN. The town is pleasantly situated on the face of a hill, and is formed of several spacious streets, Main street being the principal one. The shops are well stocked, and would do credit to towns of greater pretensions. A police court is held at the Town Hall as occasion requires. The Established church, in Main street, is a neat building, and is ornamented by a spire and clock. There is a Free church, and there are also places of worship for the United and Reformed Presbyterians, Evangelical Unionists, Primitive Methodists, Baptists, and Roman Catholics. The branch banks are the British Linen Company, City of Glasgow, Royal Bank of Scotland, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland. There are several schools, the principal being the Wishaw Academy, the public school, and a public library. About thirty-five years ago, previous to the opening of the district by railways, Wishaw was a place of little importance, but since then, owing to the increased facilities offered for the despatch of the produce of this district, it has advanced with great rapidity, having quadrupled its population within that time. Two newspapers are published here, viz: "The Clydesdale News," and "The Wishaw Press." The staple trade of the district is coal, of which mineral there is upwards of one million tons sent from Wishaw annually. Among the establishments which give employment to a great number of workmen are the extensive railway carriage and wagon works of Messrs. Pickering & Son, near the railway station, which were established in 1864, and cover four acres of ground; they are capable of turning out 160 finished wagons and 200 sets of wheels and axles per month; the Wishaw Iron Works, two iron foundries, the fire clay works of Messrs. W. Hudspith & Co., the distillery of Messrs. J. M. Mackenzie & Co., and the malleable iron works of Messrs. John Williams & Co. The gentlemen's seats in the neighbourhood are numerous—Wishaw Castle, the seat of the late Lady Belhaven; Allanton House, Sir Henry Seaton-Steuart, Bart.; Coltness House, James Houldsworth, Esq.; Cambusnethan House, the seat of James Sinclair-Lockhart, Esq.; and Garrion Tower, the residence of J. Munro Mackenzie, Esq. About two miles S.W. from the town and near to the Clyde, is an ancient grave yard, the burial place of the Lords of Belhaven and Stenton, and it is said that the original parish church stood upon this site, but no trace of it whatever now remains. In the grave yard stands an elegant memorial tomb of the late Lord Belhaven, who died in 1868. It was erected by his widow, and is a handsome structure of freestone, with tablets of granite on three of its sides, upon one of which are recorded the dates of birth and decease of the late nobleman. The others are inscribed with scriptural texts, &c. It stands about twenty-eight feet in height, and is about twenty feet wide at the base, and is elaborately sculptured throughout. In the graveyard are many memorials, rudely but curiously carved, and denoting considerable antiquity. Amongst them may be noted a headstone with the following inscription:—"Here lyes Arthur Inglis, in Nethertoun, who was shot at Stockelton Dyke, by bloody Graham, of Claversehouse, July, 1679, for his adherence to the Work of God and Scotlands covenanted work of Reformation. Rev. XII. 11., erected in the year 1733." The reverse of the stone bears a rhyming epitaph of eight lines. Several of the gravestones bear lengthwise the simple device of a sword. There are also memorials to Sir James Stuart Denham, Bart., and his consort, erected by their son, General Sir James Stuart, Bart. In 1871 Wishaw had a population of 8,812.

CAMBUSNETHAN is a parish, the village being about a mile north from Wishaw, with which burgh it is now incorporated. The ancient parish church is situated here, and is surrounded by a burial ground. The former is now an ivy-grown ruin, and has long been disused, but interments still take place in the graveyard. The present church, a modern edifice, with square tower, is in close proximity, as are also the Board schools. There is also a Free church in the village. The parish of Cambusnethan embraces an area of 16,608 statute acres, and in 1871 had a population of 20,326 persons.

BONKLE is a village in Cambusnethan parish, situated three miles north from Wishaw. There is a United Presbyterian church here.

MORNINGSIDE is a village in Cambusnethan parish, lying about two miles north-east from Wishaw. There are stations here upon the North British and Caledonian Railways, and the manufacture of fire clay goods is carried on by Messrs. Loudon and Russell, whose works are very extensive. There is a school of the Shotts Iron Company in the village. Population in 1871, 428.

CHAPEL is a hamlet adjoining Morningside, the inhabitants of which are chiefly employed in the adjacent collieries. Population in 1871, 411.

NEW MAINS is a considerable village in Cambusnethan parish, about two miles north from Wishaw, and is a station on the Caledonian line; in it are situated the extensive works of the Coltness Iron Company, who have twelve blast furnaces in operation, producing over 2,000 tons of pig iron weekly. Commodious schools have been erected by the Company, and which are now under the control of the School Board, for the education of the children of their workpeople. The village has a neat appearance, the streets being regularly formed; and the inhabitants are supplied with gas by the company. There is also a school for Roman Catholics.

OVERTOWN is a village in the same parish, two miles S.E. from Wishaw, and is a station on the Caledonian line. There is an Established church in the village, and schools maintained by the Coltness Iron Company, also a school for Roman Catholics. Population in 1871, 1,517.

STANE is a thriving and populous village about seven miles north from Wishaw, bordering on Shotts. In the village are the extensive works of the Shotts Iron Company. There are places of worship for Evangelical Unionists and Roman Catholics, and there are schools maintained by the above Company, besides several others. There is a station on the Caledonian line close to the village, which, in 1871, had a population of 814.

DYKEHEAD is a village in Shotts parish, about a mile from Stane. There is a Free church here with a school in connection. Population in 1871, 985.

LINLITHGOWSHIRE,

OR WEST LOTHIAN, is a small county, of a very irregular figure, lying on the south shore of the Frith of Forth, having Edinburghshire on the east and south-east, Lanarkshire on the south-west, and Stirlingshire on the west. The Briech and the Almond waters form the boundary line betwixt this county and that of Edinburgh, except at Mid-Calder, where the latter intrudes more than a mile into Linlithgowshire. From east to west (that is, along the shore of the Forth), the county extends sixteen miles; along its south-eastern boundary (or from Queensferry to its most eastern point) it measures about twenty.

EARLY HISTORY.—Much that is applicable to the antiquities of and historical events connected with this county has been already sufficently detailed in the annals of Edinburghshire and the capital—the district having formed at an early period a portion of the province of Lothian possessed by the Anglo-Saxons; some few particulars, more distinctly referable to this county, may, however, be here added. The Gadenii tribe of British people being overrun by the Romans, the latter formed a firm but not permanent settlement in the shire; the subjugated nations of the world had snapped their fetters—they even menaced the extinction of the Roman name; the legions were recalled to avert the catastrophe, and Britain was left exposed to the devastations of her more ferocious neighbours. During the residence of the Romans in West Lothian, which was the outermost part of their conquest in this direction, they gave a site to the wall which they built across the island. No part of Valentia was so well protected by forts. From the station at Cramond, a Roman road proceeded westward, along the shore of the Forth to Carriden, where the wall terminated; and along the seashore were several posts, which, according to old historians, were strenthened by towers. In modern times a variety of urns, coins, and other relics of the Romans have been discovered in the shire. It is understood that after the departure of the Romans, and a good deal later, this part of Lothian became occupied by the Scoto-Irish and Northern adventurers, in greater numbers than in that portion now called Edinburghshire.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The aggregate surface of Linlithgowshire is neither flat nor hilly. The most remarkable protuberances form a range running obliquely across the middle of the county. The central and western parts have the most hilly ground, while on the east and south the land is mostly level. The elevations are generally well clothed with verdure and ornamental woods; about one-third of the whole county is either woodland or old pasture, laid down with artificial grasses; and there are more than four-fifths of the shire enclosed. Until the year 1723 there was little improvement in the agriculture of the district; soon after this period, John, Earl of Stair, introduced new and advantageous modes of husbandry, and commenced the cultivation of the cabbage, turnip, and carrot by the plough; the example of this nobleman was beneficially followed by Charles, first Earl of Hopetoun; but both dying, thirty years elapsed before agricultural spirit was again actively displayed. In more recent times, some practical farmers, possessing the advantages of skill and capital, have brought the cultivation of the shire to comparative perfection; and now this rich and lovely district participates in the general improvements of Southern Caledonia. With the exception of Cairnaple, in the parish of Torphichen, which rises about fifteen hundred feet above the level of the sea, the mountains of this district are not of great altitude, nor are they numerous—Binny Craig and Cocklerue are the only other eminences that attract notice; they are respectively about five hundred feet high.

MINERALS AND MANUFACTURES.—Linlithgowshire contains a store of minerals of the most useful kind. Coal abounds throughout, limestone is equally prevalent, in some parts ironstone is also found in profusion, and the whole surface seems to rest on a bed of sandstone of the finest quality; silver and lead mines were formerly wrought, and there is plenty of marl, potters' clay, brick clay and red chalk. Many places present volcanic appearances, particularly at Dundas Hill, in the parish of Dalmeny, where there is a bold front of basaltic rocks, exhibiting in some instances columns of that character. Of the MANUFACTURES of the shire, salt is the chief article; and there are tanneries, breweries, distilleries and chemical works in the principal towns. The trade in [illegible] employs a great number of the inhabitants. This county is remarkable for the state of its population, having undergone less increase in its amount within the last eighteen years than most other districts, especially those which are more favoured by being the seat of manufactures. Besides this, the circumstance of stagnation, or at least but slow progress in population, may be attributed to its scarcity of large towns and the general dependence on agriculture under a steady mode of farming.

RIVERS AND RAILWAYS.—The only river of consequence is the Almond, or Amond, but there are a number of considerable rivulets and burns, and the Forth yields advantages which amply compensate for the deficiency of river navigation. The Almond rises in the high grounds of Lanarkshire, and, pursuing a north-easterly course, falls into the sea at Cramond; at its mouth it assumes the appearance of a small loch or arm of the sea, running up the bottom of a woody ravine; but it is not navigable except for a very short distance, and that only for boats and very small sloops. The main line of RAILWAY that passes through this county is the Edinburgh and Glasgow Section of the North British line. Bathgate and Uphall are communicated with by the Edinburgh and Bathgate branch line, Bo'ness by the Monkland Section, Queensferry by another branch, and Whitburn by the Wilsontown Section—all from the main line.

DIVISIONS AND REPRESENTATION, &c.—This county was probably separated into the sheriffdom in the reign of David I.; it was placed by Robert, however, under the administration of a constable, and so it continued until the time of James IV. No other district appears to have been so divided into petty baronies, baillieries, regalities and other independent jurisdictions, nor so domineered over by a number of peers inimical to peace and regardless of justice. The oldest family in the shire is that of Dundas, who can trace an unbroken line of descent and residence on the same spot up to the reign of William the Lion (1165), an antiquity rarely to be found surpassed, not only in Scotland, but in any other country. Linlithgowshire comprises eleven parishes and two parts of parishes, which, with two in Mid-Lothian and four in Stirlingshire, form one presbytery. It contains two royal burghs, namely, Linlithgow and Queensferry; the next largest town is Bathgate. Its seaport is Bo'ness, and there are a number of thriving villages. The burghs of Linlithgow, Hamilton, Lanark, Airdrie and Falkirk, in conjunction, send one member to the imperial parliament, and the shire at large another. The member at present sitting (1877) for the shire is Peter M'Lagan, Esq., of Pumpherston. The acreage of the county is 76,800. The number of inhabited houses in 1871 was 6,255, the population numbering 40,965—males, 20,855, females, 20,110—shewing an increase over that of 1861 of 2,320. The parliamentary constituency is 1,193.

WITH THE VILLAGES OF ARMADALE, TORPHICHEN, BLACKRIDGE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BATHGATE is a market town, an independent burgh of barony, and a parish; situated on the middle road betwixt Edinburgh and Glasgow, 18 miles w. from the former, 24 E. from the latter, and between five and six s. from Linlithgow. It is a station on the Bathgate branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow and Monklands sections of the North British Railway. Another line is completed to Airdrie, Bo'ness, &c., joining the North British line at Manuel. The town occupies a pleasant sight, near the southern base of a great ridge of hills, extending across the county, and sheltering the town on the north and east; while it has a fine southern exposure, and is seen at a considerable distance from that direction and from the west. These hills abound with limestone quarries, in which are found fine specimens of fossil remains. Visitors from America, &c. have lately been geologising in the district, and have procured some rare specimens. Bathgate lays claim to high antiquity. Malcolm IV. granted to the monks of Holyrood the church at Bathkel, with the land belonging to it; at one period the town and its adjoining lands formed part of the ample possessions of King Robert Bruce, which, in 1306, he gave as a dowry to his daughter Marjory, on her marriage with Walter, the Great Stewart, and this marriage introduced the Stuart family to the throne of Scotland. The town, which is lighted with gas by a joint-stock company, consists of a new and an old part; the former is well built, and the streets are paved; it is about to be abundantly supplied with water of an excellent quality by a new water works, costing £6,000. Few places of its size can show so much bustle and tidiness, and the town is considered to be very healthy. Bathgate was made a burgh of barony by Charles II. in 1661, and was created a free and independent burgh of barony by act of parliament in 1824, and placed under the control of a provost, three bailies, twelve councillors, a treasurer, a town clerk, and a procurator fiscal. It has now adopted Provost Lindsay's Police Act of 1862, and is governed by twelve commissioners. The sheriff holds small debt courts here once a quarter. Of late years the town has acquired a very considerable increase of population, in a great measure owing to the adjacent coal and lime mines. Young's Paraffin Light Company, Limited, have extensive works a mile and a quarter from the town; an iron foundry, three spade and shovel, and a glass works are in the town, and a large distillery near to it. The weaving of goods for the Glasgow manufacturers, which at one time employed many hands, is now only carried on to a very limited extent. On the north border of the parish, the silver mine workings were a few years ago re-opened. These were once greatly esteemed, and the precious metal smelted not far from the spot before being coined. James VI. took a great interest in the concern, although history tells us, not much to his profit. Mr. Henry Aitken (of the firm of Messrs. Russell & Son), the renowned coalmaster, obtained a lease of the mines from the Earl of Hopetoun, the proprietor, but after earnest research found them to be unprofitable. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, an United Presbyterian chapel, an Evangelical Union chapel, and also a Roman Catholic chapel, all of which have a manse or residence for the minister. The burgh boasts of a superior educational institution in the Bathgate Academy, endowed by the late John Newland, of Kingston, Jamaica, a native of this town: the sum bequeathed by this gentleman amounted, previous to the erection of this building, to between £16,000 and £17,000. The Academy stands on a commanding and healthy site in the immediate vicinity of the town, and is an elegant and extensive structure—it comprises seven large classrooms, library-room, and rector's house. The courses of education are conducted on the most approved systems, by a rector, and a number of teachers. It is now under government inspection, and is managed by trustees, one of whom represents the Lord of the Manor, and another is appointed by the Commissioners. The youth of the parish have thus the benefit of a first-rate instruction in all the useful and many of the more learned branches, while others, not parishioners, are admitted at the discretion of the trustees. The Parish Board School, which is situated near the Academy, has a handsome appearance, and is numerously attended. There are four bank branches, viz.: the Clydesdale, the National, the Royal, and the Union Bank, and a Savings Bank. The principal commercial and posting establishments are Stewart's and Craig's Hotels, where commercial men and others will find ample accommodation, and there are also two restaurants in the town. The market day is Tuesday, when a large supply of grain of all kinds is brought from the surrounding country. The buyers and sellers are accommodated in a splendid building erected in Jarvey street, called the Corn Exchange. The building also contains spacious rooms for courts and for other public meetings. The following eminent men were born in the parish: Dr. John Fleming, professor of natural science, Aberdeen; Dr. John Reid, professor of anatomy, St. Andrews; and the celebrated Sir James Simpson, Bart., whose reputation is European. The authorities of the burgh are entitled to hold (by act of parliament), seven annual fairs—namely, on the third Wednesdays in April, July and August, on the first Wednesdays after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas (o.s.), and the fourth Wednesdays in June and October; the Whitsuntide and Martinmas fairs are the principal, and are well attended by cattle dealers. The entire parish of Bathgate, which embraces an area of 10,876 acres, had in in 1871 a population of 10,129, the town at the same period having 4,991.

ARMADALE is a village in the parish of and two miles west from Bathgate, on the main road from Edinburgh to Glasgow. It is in a flourishing state, being situated amongst large fields of iron stone, gas coal, common coal, &c., and is well supplied with gas by a public company. It was lately created a police burgh, with nine commissioners. The village takes its name from an estate long the property of Sir William Honeyman, a senator of the College of Justice, under the title of Lord Armadale. The places of worship in the village are a Chapel of Ease to Bathgate Established church, a Free church, an Episcopal, and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. A railway passing near to the village, offers facilities for mineral traffice; and Armadale is a station on the Western section of the North British Railway. Several thriving hamlets surround the village. The mining villages of DURHAMTOWN, POLKEMMET, and BATHVILLE are also situated in the parish. Population of Armadale in 1871, 2708

TORPHICHEN is a parish and village, the latter on the road from Bathgate to Linlithgow, 2½ miles N. by. W. from Bathgate, and 4½ S.W. by S. from Linlithgow. It is a place of great antiquity, and was once of importance; but it has now an entirely rural character, and presents a straggling, yet pleasant appearance. Adjacent to the village on the north-east are some remains of the hospital or preceptory of Torphichen, the principal Scottish residence of the Knights of St. John, of Jerusalem; of the church of the preceptory, the chancel and the nave are entirely gone, and only the choir and the transept remain. The nave is traditionally reported to have been of great length; but its site is now occupied by an edifice of a very different character, the plain modern Parish church. There is also a Free church in the village, said to be one of the first Free churches in Scotland. In the village are two excellent Board schools, conducted by efficient teachers. The parish, although in some parts rather moorish, is generally fertile; coal and ironstone are found within it, and there are two brick and tile works and a paper mill within its bounds. Acreage, 9,939. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,630.

BLACKRIDGE is a small hamlet in the parish of Torphichen, about five miles and a half from Bathgate to the west, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow road, seated in an agricultural district. A Free church is situated in the village, and a school near to it.

BORROWSTOUNNESS,

AND THE PARISH OF CARRIDEN, WITH THE VILLAGES OF GRANGE PANS, MUIRHOUSES, BRIDGENESS, BLACKNESS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BORROWSTOUNNESS (or as it is now generally pronounced Bo'ness) is an ancient sea-port, burgh of barony and parish bounded on the north by the Frith of Forth, on the south by the parish of Linlithgow, on the east by Carriden, and on the west by the river Avon, which separates it from Stirlingshire. Its length eastward is about four miles, and its average breadth is about two. The town is 18 miles w. from Edinburgh, 9 w. from Queen's Ferry, 3½ N. from Linlithgow, 8 from Falkirk, and 5 E. from Grangemouth. It is situated on the south shore of the Frith of Forth, on a piece of low ground or ness, and consists principally of two streets, running eastward, terminating in one of nearly the same length, the greater portion of the houses forming which appear to be of very old date. Between 1750 and 1780, Bo'ness was one of the most thriving towns on the east coast, and ranked as the third port in Scotland; but when the junction of the Forth and Clyde was effected by means of the great canal, Grangemouth, situated at the east end of the canal, became the chief seat of commerce, and in 1810 was erected into a separate port, with a Custom House. The trade of Bo'ness then greatly declined. It is the seat of a Custom House, whose district extends on both sides of the Forth from Cramond Water and Denibristle Point to the boundaries of the ports of Grangemouth and Alloa. The harbour is good and safe—consisting of a basin 240 feet in breadth, with two piers 566 feet each in length, and has a depth of from sixteen to twenty feet; a great advantage and inducement to shippers and traders frequenting the harbour is that of moderate port charges. The Monkland section of the North British Railway terminates at the harbour. Bo'ness is one of the chief places on the Forth for the manufacture of salt. Besides these works there are a distillery, an earthenware manufactory, a fire brick works, a ropery, four iron foundries, three engineering establishments, and a chemical works. At KINNEIL, about half a mile westward, are extensive iron works, erected about twenty-five years ago, which affords employment to fifteen hundred persons. At these works are four blast furnaces for smelting the ore, with which, as well as that of coal, the Kinneil estate abounds; from this cause the population of the parish and the shipping has been greatly increased. In 1839, the aggregate tonnage of the port was 6,521; in 1851, the tonnage inward was 14,148; outward, 97,565; total, 111,713; in 1865, the registered tonnage was 5,325; the tonnage of shipping inward, with cargo from foreign parts, was 8,093, and outward 112,111. In 1871, the tonnage inwards was 21,899, and outwards, 41,168. Coasting trade, inward, 3,462, and outward, 12,409; gross tonnage for 1871, 78,938; and for 1875, 92,000. Branches of the Clydesdale Bank, and the Royal Bank of Scotland, are established in the town. The Duke of Hamilton is superior of the burgh, the government being vested in a body of trustees. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel; also two public and several other schools. Kinneil House, one of the family seats of the Duke of Hamilton, is the most remarkable building in the parish. Here the celebrated Watt realised some of his earliest improvements upon the steam engine; and Professor Dugald Stewart was the last tenant. The barony of Kinneil is one of the most ancient possessions of the house of Hamilton. The Roman wall of Antonius, commonly called "Graham's Dyke," passes through the parish; and within a short distance of the town to the south-east the traces of the Roman camp are still visible. The village of BORROWSTOUN lies about a mile inland from Bo'ness. The parish of Bo'ness has an area of 3,145, and in 1871 contained a population of 4,986, the town having 4,256 of this number

The parish of CARRIDEN is bounded by Bo'ness on the West, Abercorn on the east, and Linlithgow on the south; it lies on the south bank of the Forth, and is not more than two miles in length by one in breadth. The whole district is well enclosed and cultivated. This and the adjoining parish of Bo'ness were amongst the first localities in Scotland in which coal was found. At present mining operations in both coal and iron are carried on very extensively. The other branches of trade form part of what is given as regards Bo'ness. Within the parish of Carriden, besides its own village, are those of GRANGE PANS, MUIRHOUSES, BRIDGENESS and BLACKNESS, the latter, which in former times previous to the rise of Bo'ness, from local advantages was a harbour of considerable importance, was also celebrated for its castle, which, during the reign of James VI., was the principal state prison in Scotland, and as such received within its gloomy walls many distinguished persons: one of the most remarkable of its prisoners was Lord Ochiltree, who, for accusing the Marquis of Hamilton of aspiring to the Scottish crown, was here confined during nearly the whole reign of Charles I.—upwards of twenty years—and was not liberated until the country fell under the dominion of Cromwell. Blackness castle is one of the ancient fortresses, whose preservation was guaranteed by the act of Union. The edifice was converted to the purposes of a barrack in the course of the long protracted war. Recently, however, from the continued agitation of the city of Edinburgh, the government has altered, repaired, and fitted up this castle as a powder magazine or depot—with barracks attached for accommodating a company of soldiers in charge of the magazine, stores, and premises. A small pier has also been erected for shipping and landing stores at the castle. The pier of Bridgeness affords good accommodation for small vessels employed in the exportation of salt, coals, ironstone, &c. At Grange Pans are the works of Archibald Ballantyne, Esq., ironfounder, and the Forthbank Foundry Company—also a salt works and brick works. At GRANGE, the residence of Henry Caddell, Esq., the proprietor, are extensive coal and ironworks. Within the parish of Carriden, and a mile east of Grange is Carriden House, the seat of Admiral C. Hope, G.C.B. The place of worship is the parish Church. There is a public school and one for girls, with a subscription school at Grange Pans. Colonel Gardiner was born at Burnfoot in this parish. Acreage of the parish of Carriden, 2,705; population in 1871, 1,799.

LINLITHGOW,

MUIRAVONSIDE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LINLITHGOW, popularly pronounced Lithgow, is an ancient royal burgh, the capital of the shire and parish of its name, and the seat of the presbytery of Linlithgow; 16 miles W. from Edinburgh, 31 E. by N. from Glasgow, 8 E. from Falkirk, and three and a half from Bo'ness; seated on the bank of a fine lake, and on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British Railway, for which line a principal station is established here. It is chiefly formed of a single street, which runs east and west along the south edge of the water. Some of the houses in the town still possess the characteristic feature of the Scotch style of architecture, but many of the older specimens have within the last few years been replaced by more modern tenements. The town, however, still possesses a variety of objects that cannot fail to interest the attentive traveller and impress the mind with an idea of its ancient grandeur. Amongst these are the magnificent ruins of its royal palace, the venerable church adjoining, and the terraced promontory on which both edifices were erected. The palace is a quadrangular building, enclosing a spacious open court, and occupies the site of a Roman castle. The castle was razed and re-erected by Edward I. of England; and of this structure there still exist three round towers on the east side of the palace, and which have been used as abutments for supporting the massive east wall of the palace. The palace was a favourite hunting scene of the Stuart dynasty; and was enlarged and enriched by nearly all of these princes. James IV. was particularly attached to his Linlithgow residence, and in the poem of "Marmion" Scott has vividly depicted the bustle and gaiety of the Court there. Mary Stuart, the lovely and unfortunate Queen of Scots, was born in a room on the west side of the palace on December 5th, 1542; but there are few other noteworthy incidents connected with it. In the centre of the palace quadrangle may be seen the shattered remains of a beautiful fountain, exquisitely and elaborately carved by Italian artists, who were brought over by one of the Stuarts. A restoration of this fountain was made by the late Mr. Matheson, of Her Majesty's Board of Works, and it now adorns the west front of Holyrood House. This fountain was supplied with water from the estate of Preston, about a mile distant, and the pipes leading to it were discovered in digging a drain in the Carmelite Friars' lands on the south side of the town. The church is a beautiful example of later Gothic architecture. The nave and transept are richly carved and ornamented, but the choir and apse are of a more recent and inferior style. At the west end there is a massive square tower and belfry, which, till the beginning of the present century, was surmounted by a crown, somewhat in the style of St. Giles', Edinburgh, There is a fine peal of bells in the tower, one of them being dated as re-cast in 1468, and bearing an inscription that it had been named then, as formerly, "Meg Duncan." The Established congregation worship in the choir, which is divided from the nave by an ornamented party wall. In the vestry are to be seen some interesting relics of the church; and in the south end of the transept (called St. Catherine's aisle) the Scotch nobles are said to have attempted, by means of a spectral apparition, to terrify James IV. from persisting in his invasion of England. Among the ancient dwellings a particular house used to be pointed out to strangers as the place from whence Hamilton of Bothwellhaugh shot the regent Murray. A bronze tablet, with the effigy of the Regent, has been inserted in the wall of the county-court rooms to denote the spot where the house stood. On the north side of the railway, a little to the west of the station, is an old house which formed part of a preceptory of the Knights Templars of Torphichen, and was used in the reign of James VI. as the Scottish mint. The ancient Prætorium, or Town-house, an elegant structure, erected in 1688, was partially destroyed by fire in 1847, but was immediately repaired; it contains a council chamber and sheriff court-room, and a large hall, tastefully decorated for public meetings. To the north of this stands the County Hall, which is handsome and convenient, and contains full length portraits of the late General Hope, of Hopetoun, of his brother, Sir Alexander Hope, both distinguished officers, and of the present Earl of Rosebery. Linlithgow is one of the oldest royal burghs in Scotland. The Town Council is fifteen in number, and the magistrates elected from the council are a provost and three bailies. The burgh unites with Lanark, Hamilton, Airdrie and Falkirk in sending one member to parliament, the present one (1877) being John Ramsay, Esq. of Kildalton. The county has lately erected a spacious court-house, on the south side of the street, a little to the west of the Cross Well. The building contains offices for the sheriff, sheriff's clerk, procurator fiscal, and chief constable; besides a spacious court-room, small court-room, witnesses and jury rooms, and a hall for the procurators of court. Immediately opposite to the Town-house is a fountain, completed on the 4th of June, 1807, in imitation of the ancient Cross Well; it is of hexagonal form, ascended by steps; the water descends from the top of the fountain, which is surmounted by a unicorn holding a shield; the stream falls into a basin, from whence it is spouted into a larger one through the mouths of six grotesque figures, whence it again issues through the jaws of six other heads into a still more capacious receptacle, which is surrounded by statues in male and female ancient costumes; here all the streams are concentrated, and find egress in a copious gush, from which the inhabitants are supplied with water. The work is said to have been all hewn by a one-handed mason. This architectural curiosity is surrounded by iron palisades of light and elegant workmanship. Several other fountains of similar formation are to be seen in the town. The Combination Poor House at St. Magdalen's, on rising ground, about a quarter of a mile from the town, was erected in 1854, and is a neat and commodious building, including several lunatic wards. The cost of the erection was £9,000, defrayed by the following parishes in proportion, according to the number of shares which each has in the establishment. Linlithgow is the largest contributor, and others in the following order: Borrowstounness, Bathgate, Whitburn, Carriden, Kirkliston, Muiravonside, and Abercorn. Paper-making, tanning, currying, and shoemaking may be taken as the staples of the trade. In the tanning and carrying branches are several large establishments, the principal of which belongs to Messrs. T. Nimmo & Co. There are also close to the town two paper mills, a distillery, and soap works. The Union canal passes close by the town; an extensive basin of excellent masonry affords commodious accommodation to vessels trading in the canal; and a beautiful aqueduct, unsurpassed in the United Kingdom, conducts its water on twelve arches over the river Avon and a deep and extensive valley. The railway before mentioned passes along the south side of the main street. Near to the bridge, about a mile to the west, the line is carried over the Avon by means of a viaduct of 19 arches of substantial masonry. The places of worship are the Parish church, a Free church, two United Presbyterian chapels, one for Independents, and one for Roman Catholics. There is a Board school and several good educational establishments, both public and private, boarding and day; and there is a very useful Charity school, erected and endowed by the benevolence of Mrs. Douglas, sister of the late venerable and lamented Dr. Dobbie, minister of this parish. A weekly market for grain is held on Friday, and there are fairs on the Friday after the second Tuesday in January, February 25th, the third Friday in April, the second Tuesday in June, August 2nd, and the first Friday in November. In 1871 Linlithgow contained a population of 3,690.

MUIRAVONSIDE is a parish in the county of Stirling, about two miles from Linlithgow, its post town, and about seven miles from Falkirk. It is situate on the left bank of the Avon, which river is here rendered of great service in propelling the works of a number of mills on its banks. The parish, which is six miles in length by two in breadth, is bounded by the parishes of Bo'ness, Linlithgow, Torphichen, Polmont and Slamannan. The land is nearly all arable and enclosed, and beneath the surface there is abundance of coal, lime and iron. The latter is manufactured by Russell & Son, of Falkirk, near to which, at Causewayend, are the works of the Linlithgow Foundry Company, ironfounders. The parish of Muiravonside covers an area of 7,968 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 2,653.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY,

ON THE EDINBURGH AND GLASGOW SECTION OF THE NORTH BRITISH RAILWAY.

Station, at the east end of the town—John Hunter, station master

QUEENSFERRY, or as it is sometimes called, SOUTH QUEENSFERRY (in contradistinction to North Queensferry, a harbour of Fifeshire), is a royal burgh and parish, the latter being confined within the limits of the former; 9 miles west from Edinburgh, the same distance east from Bo'ness, and 4 south east from Rosyth; a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British Railway, situated between the shore of the Frith of Forth and the ridge that rises from the coast. It is an excellent and safe harbour, and can be entered at any time according to the tide. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having received its name from the Queen of Malcolm Canmore (Margaret), who usually made choice of the ferry at this place for the passage of the Frith. Under her auspices the town increased in size, population and commerce, but in the present day it is not conspicuous for either; it has no foreign trade, and through the winter it is chiefly supported by fishing. Some little consequence belongs to it from being the ferry at Newhalls (a little to the eastward of the town) over the Forth; there is another pier a short distance to the westward, for the convenience of boats when they cannot make the former point; they are both handsome slips or piers, and run a considerable distance into the water. At this place the Frith is contracted to a gut of two miles in width; and in the middle of the strait lies a small rocky island called INCHGARVIE. About half a mile to the westward is Port Edgar, so named from Prince Edgar having landed there. From this place George IV. when on a visit to Scotland, embarked on his return to England. As a royal burgh, Queensferry is governed by a provost, two bailies, and a town council. The burgh unites with Stirling, Culross, Inverkeithing and Dumfermline in returning one member to parliament. The Right Hon. the Earl of Rosebery gave a piece of ground for a bleach green to the inhabitants, and also conveyed water into the town for their use, the magistrates and council, to evince their gratitude for these favours, raised a tablet, with an appropriate inscription over the fount. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, and a chapel for the Presbyterians. A fair is held on the second Friday in August. The population of Queensferry, including Dalmeny, was in 1871, 1521.

DALMENY is a parish and small village in the north-east of Linlithgowshire; the parish consists of a main body and a detached district, the main body surrounds its post town, Queensferry, and contains some of that town's outskirts on the east and west. Its length from east to west is five miles and a half, and breadth three and a half miles. Nearly the whole of the parish is well cultivated and enclosed, and contains some mansions amongst which are Lord Rosebery's, Craigie Hall, Dundas Castle, &c. The village, which is about a mile from Queensferry, contains the parish church and parochial school; the former is of very great antiquity, built in the mixed Greek and Gothic style of architecture. There are only about a dozen more houses in the village. The small hamlet of CRAIGIE is in the parish.

UPHALL, WITH BROXBURN,

ECCLESMACHAN, DECHMONT AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

THE parish of Uphall is bounded by Kirkliston on the north-east and east, by Mid Calder on the south, Livingstone on the west, and Linlithgow and Ecclesmachan on the north. It is intersected from west to east by the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and is watered by a rivulet called BROXBURN, on which and the public road stands the straggling village of that name, at the distance of ten miles from Edinburgh, and seven from Linlithgow. The western extremity of the village is crossed by the Union Canal from Edinburgh. A church of the Establishment is at Uphall, and one each for a Free congregation and Roman Catholics at Broxburn. It also contains a Parochial School. In the chancel of Uphall Church are deposited the remains of the Hon. Henry Erskine, as also of the late Lord Chancellor Erskine. Shale, which is now so largely used in the manufacture of paraffin oil, of which there are several extensive works in the locality, is found in abundance in the neighbourhood, and is said to be of a very rich quality; bone manures are also manufactured in the village. Altogether Broxburn is in a prosperous condition. The parish abounds in coal, sandstone, limestone, and ironstone. The district is chiefly of an upland character, but it is under the best system of agriculture and enclosure, and possesses some large plantations. The parish of Uphall comprises 4,541 acres, and had in 1871 a population of 2,772.

The small parish of ECCLESMACHAN lies south of Abercorn and east of Linlithgow, about five miles from the latter town, and a mile and a half from Uphall; it is four miles in length by one in breadth; is watered by a tributary of the Almond; and near the church is a weak sulphurous spring, called the Bullion Well. There is a church of the Establishment and a Parochial school in the parish, which is a flat corn country, altogether under cultivation and based on freestone. Acreage of the parish, 2,647; population in 1871, 829

DECHMONT is a small village in the parish of Livingstone, and about a mile and a quarter west from Uphall, its post town, situate on the road from Edinburgh to Glasgow. There is a National school near to the village.

WHITBURN,

CROFTHEAD, LONGRIDGE, BLACKBURN, AND LIVINGSTONE.

WHITBURN, or WHITEBURN, is a parish and village, the latter 21 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 10 s. from Linlithgow, and 4 from Bathgate; situated on the south road from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and on the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway, on which line the company have a station at EAST WHITBURN, about a mile distant. It is a regularly built little place, and is supported by the coal and iron mines with which the parish abounds, and a little weaving of cotton goods for the Glasgow houses. It contains a public library and a handsome schoolhouse, the latter built by the trustees of the late Mr. Wilson, who bequeathed a considerable part of his property for the laudable purpose of erecting and supporting charity schools in the district. Within the parish are three other villages, called EAST WHITBURN, LONGRIDGE, and CROFTHEAD. The two latter are populous and increasing, and the inhabitants are chiefly employed by the neighbouring coal works. The places of worship are the Established church and a Free church. The parish is watered by the Almond, the Breich, and two small rivulets. There is much moss and pasture land in the upper portion; in the lower division, on the contrary, the surface is arable, and admirably planted and enclosed. Acreage of the parish, 9,775 population in 1871, 6,911; of which the village numbered 1,432.

BLACKBURN is a small village in the parish of and about 4 miles west of Livingstone, seated on the bank of the Almond. Adjacent to the village is a lake stone quarry, said to be one of the only two in Scotland. The stone is used in the construction of ovens, being capable of bearing any amount of heat, but is useless for building purposes. There are two subscription schools in the village.

CROFTHEAD is a populous and increasing village in the parish of and about four miles south-west of Whitburn. It is surrounded by coal and iron stone mines, which, with the paraffin oil works, afford employment to the greater portion of the inhabitants. The Wilsontown section of the North British Railway passes close to the village and has a station here. There is a Catholic chapel in the village, and one of Wilson's Endowed Schools; also two colliery schools near to it; population in 1871, 954.

LIVINGSTONE is a parish and village—the former stretching from five to six miles along the north bank of the Breich water, which separates the county from Edinburghshire, and has a breadth of from three to four miles. The village, which is not large, is six miles from Whitburn and four from Blackburn, situated on the banks of the Almond water, and on one of the roads from Edinburgh to Glasgow. The parish church is situated at the west end of the village, and the other place of worship is a Free church erected in 1858, with a manse. There is also in the village a parochial school. Acreage of the parish, 5,362; population in 1871, 1,727.

NAIRNSHIRE.

THIS is a small maritime county in the north-eastern part of Scotland, once forming a portion of the ancient province of Moray. It is bounded on the north by the Moray Frith, on the east by the shire of Elgin (or Moray), and on the south and west by the county of Inverness. It extends from the coast, on the north, to the small lake of Lochindorb (situate at its extreme southern apex), on the south twenty miles; the breadth along the shore is twelve miles, and its sides vary from twelve to twenty-two miles asunder. The shire comprises two hundred and fifteen square miles; the number of acres in the shire is one hundred and thirty-seven thousand five hundred.

SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The agricultural properties of Nairnshire assimilate so closely with those of the county of Elgin, that but brief notice of its wealth and capabilities in this respect is here necessary. Exclusive of the hilly part of the district, it may be described as a narrow border of level ground, along the shore, from one to nearly six miles in breadth—and here, for the most part, it is arable; but as the country recedes farther from the coast, it becomes bleak and hilly; there are, however, no eminences of great altitude or note in the whole county. The farms are usually small, and most frequently unenclosed. Sheep and black cattle are reared in considerable numbers, and chiefly fed on the natural pasturage. The county is crossed, in its southern or hilly part, by the river Findhorn, which runs in a direction from south-west to north-east; parallel with this rapid stream, about eight or nine miles to the west, courses the river Nairn, which also runs into the Moray Frith. Besides the rivers there are several small brooks, the banks of which are covered with woods and plantations; and there are some elegant seats scattered over the country.

RAILWAY.—The only railway which passes through this county is the Highland railway, on which line Nairn is a station.

Small as this shire is, it possesses a distinct political and judicial establishment. It comprises three complete parochial divisions with seven parts of parishes, and contains one royal burgh, NAIRN, which is the only town. This burgh, in conjunction with Inverness, Fortrose and Forres, sends one member to Parliament; and the county unites with Elginshire in returning another representative—the present member (1877) for the joint counties being Viscount Macduff. According to the population returns for 1871, Nairnshire contained 4,786 males and 5,439 females, total 10,225; in 1861 it numbered 10,065. The number of inhabited houses at the former date was 2,029.

NAIRN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ARDCLACH AND AULDEARN, AND THE VILLAGE OF CAWDOR.

NAIRN is a royal burgh of considerable antiquity, having been regalised by William the Lion. It is supposed that the town derives its name from the river Nearn, in Gaelic meaning alders—the river or water being understood. The original charter of the burgh is not extant. It was granted by Alexander I. in the year 1100, and was renewed by King James VI.—the gentle King Jamie—the first of the Stewarts who ascended the English throne. It is stated of this monarch that he boasted of having a town in Scotland, the burgh of Nairn, which was so long that the inhabitants of the one end could not understand the language spoken at the other end. There was truth in this so far, at least, that till lately the border of the Highlands seemed to intersect the town about Rose street, and the Highlanders naturally clung together and loved to congregate at that end of the town. Distance by rail from Edinburgh, 185 miles; from Aberdeen, 93¼; from Perth, by the Inverness and Perth Junction Railway, 128¾; from Forres, 9½; and from Inverness, 15¼ miles. There is an excellent harbour, with breakwater and pier, and a landing-stair convenient at all states of the tide. Approaching the town from the west, is seen the Nairn Hospital, a handsome building erected by subscription in 1846. Near the centre of High-street is a spacious structure erected about 1818, containing the town and county gaol, and a town and county-court room. For a seaport town Nairn enjoys certain advantages, obtained from a fertile country yielding various articles proper for exportation; and if encouragement were given to establish a ferry between Nairn and Cromarty, it would open an intercourse between the country on the northern and southern sides of the Firth. The exports consist of timber, corn, potatoes, eggs, smoked haddocks, herrings, and freestone. The imports are groceries, hardware, lime, manures, and coal. Three branch banking establishments are settled here, and also a savings bank. The herring fishery and curing process is carried on successfully, and salmon fishing is also prosecuted. About four miles distant is the celebrated "Royal Brackla Distillery," a very extensive establishment. The Highland Railway facilitates intercourse with the surrounding country, and the transit of goods and produce. The freestone quarries in the neighbourhood give employment to a number of men, the value of the stone annually sent to different parts of the country from these quarries being upwards of £5,000. The burgh unites with Inverness, Fortrose, and Forres in returning one member to Parliament. The present member is Fraser Mackintosh, Esq., of Inverness. A sheriff's court is held here twice weekly, and a small debt court weekly. Nairn has been considerably improved of late years, being much resorted to in summer, its beach is inviting, and in the neighbourhood is some fine scenery and many agreeable residences. About three years ago new baths were erected by a public company, at a cost of about £15,000, the floors of which are formed of the solid rock, with a graduated depth of water. A new Public Hall has also been erected at a cost of about £12,000, which will accommodate 800 persons. It is situated in the High street, and adds greatly to the general appearance of the town. The places of worship are the Parish, Free and Presbyterian churches, and a chapel each for English and Scotch Episcopalians, Independents and Roman Catholics. There is an excellent museum, containing a valuable cabinet of minerals. At the western extremity of the town, adjoining what was formerly the parish school, a neat monument was erected some years since to Mr. John Straith, who was forty years school master. Fairs, cattle, horse, and general markets, are held here once a month, on the Saturday following Muir of Ord Market. Corn markets on Thursday weekly. Feeing markets, Thursdays preceding 26th May and 22nd November. The area of the parish is 8,827 statute acres, and its population was in 1871, 4,869. Of this number 3,751 were returned for the town.

ARDCLACH, is a Highland parish, in the south-east of the county, The parish is in general mountainous, covered with heath, and abounding in tracts of bleak and barren moss. It contains no village worthy of the name; till within the last few years it consisted of small crofters, with their plots of land, reclaimed from the surrounding wilds; but of late great improvements in agriculture have taken place, every year increasing the arable acreage of this parish. The river Findhorn traverses the parish, and the scenery along its banks is of the most varied and interesting description. There is a considerable quantity of timber along the banks of the river. The Parish church is nine miles from Nairn. A Free church and an Established one are the places of worship. Population in 1871, 1,197.

AULDEARN, anciently called Erin, is a parish and village—the latter a burgh of barony, is situated two and a half miles south-east from Nairn. In the immediate neighbourhood of the village is the scene of a victory gained by the Marquis of Montrose over the forces of the covenanters. A church of the Establishment, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian church are the places of worship. The parish comprises an area of 14,735 statute acres, and in 1871 possessed a population numbering 1,279; of this number the village contained 350.

About five miles from Nairn is the interesting and picturesque village of CAWDOR, in the parish of the same name, where, upon the banks of the burn of its name, is an excellent inn, frequented by tourists and families, who visit this spot to contemplate the charming scenery around, and the towers of the ancient castle—the seat of the Thanes of Cawdor. It is occupied as a hunting lodge by the Earl of Cawdor. The stranger is granted access to this interesting structure, where are vaulted chambers, spiral staircases, and tapestried rooms. From the summit of the castle is commanded one of the most extensive and lovely views in the county: and many parties of the gay and the fashionable appreciate by their presence in the summer and autumn the various beauties of this favoured locality. The parish of Cawdor, a portion of which is in the adjoining county of Inverness, contains an area of 29,366 statute acres, and in 1871 its population numbered 1,027.

THE ORKNEY ISLES,

KNOWN to the ancients by the name of Orcades, are situated in the Northern sea, separated from Caithness-shire, in Scotland, by the Pentland Frith, and lying between the parallels of 58 deg. 44 min. and 59 deg. 25 min. north latitude, and 23 deg. 30 min. west longtitude; from the coast of Scotland they are distant four leagues, and from the Shetland Isles about fifteen. The form of the islands is extremely irregular; and from these circumstances the dimensions of some of them are ascertained with difficulty. They are separated from one another by portions of water denominated "sounds," "fritus," or ferries," some of which are only a mile broad, whilst others are more than five. Though thus closely connected, the whole of them are of considerable extent, for from the south-west to the north-east the distance is not less than seventy miles, and they are upwards of forty in another direction.

NAME, EARLY HISTORY, &c.—The earliest inhabitants appear to have been Celtic, who, at an unknown period before the Christian era, established themselves in Scotland. Diodorus Siculus mentions Cape Orkas as one of the extremities of Britain; and the Orcades are first named in the second century by Pomponius Mela, who states their number at thirty; Pliny augments them to forty, but Ptolemy makes them only thirty. Tacitus asserts that the Orcades were discovered and subdued by Agricola, which seems to be corroborated by recent discoveries in the Orkneys of Roman coins belonging to the first century. The origin of the name is believed to be Celtic, and is probably derived from Orkn, a large marine animal—a term that has been applied both to whales and seals: Orkney therefore appears to mean "the land of whales," or of "seals." The Orcades seem to have been esteemed of some importance in the time of Constantine, as they are especially mentioned with Gaul and Britain, as the patrimony of his youngest son. Little is known of the Orcades from that time until the convulsions in Norway, which ended in the elevation of Harold, "the Fair-Haired," to the undivided sovereignty of that country. About the middle of the ninth century Kenneth Macalpin obtained possession of the islands, and they continued with the Scottish throne until the end of the eleventh century, when they were assigned by King Donald Bain to the King of Norway, to whom they were subject until the middle of the thirteenth century, when they were again transferred by Magnus, King of Norway, to Alexander, King of Scotland. But, although the islands were thus ceded, the Norwegians still asserted their right to them until the year 1468, when James III. of Scotland married Margaret, daughter of the King of Denmark, with whom they again passed, in lieu of her dowry, to the crown of Scotland; and upon the birth of her son, James IV. they were finally ceded, which cession was confirmed when James IV. of Scotland married Ann, daughter of the King of Denmark. From the middle of the sixteenth to the beginning of the seventeenth century the islands were possessed successively by Earls Robert and Patrick Stewart—Robert being a natural son of James V. and half-brother to Queen Mary. Subsequent to this period the islands passed into the possession of the English Crown, and were bestowed by Charles I. and afterwards by Charles II., on the Morton family; in 1776 Lord Morton sold them to Sir Lawrence Dundas, and they have since remained in the family of his descendants. Having been so long and so repeatedly in the possession of the Norwegians, many names of persons as well as of places are derived from the Scandinavian language. It will be comprehended that the Orcadians bear no resemblance whatever to the Celtic Highlanders in language, dress, appearance, or customs. The inhabitants may be divided into three classes; the first consists of the gentry, or proprietors of land, with such as have gained a competent fortune by means of industry; the second is formed of those who are denominated tradesmen and shopkeepers; and the third comprises fishermen, and the others for the most part employed in the cultivation of the soil, and are either farmers with servants or what are termed cottagers. Orkney has given birth to some individuals who have attained to eminence in science, literature, and the arts. Of these we may mention Malcolm Laing, author of a well-known History of Scotland; Mrs. Brunton, authoress of "Self-Control;" Samuel Laing, author of a "Tour in Norway;" his son, Samuel Laing, late Finance Minister of India; the late Dr. Baikie the African traveller; Dr. Rae, the Arctic traveller; Thomas Stewart Traill, an eminent professor of medical jurisprudence in the University of Edinburgh; and Murdoch M'Kenzie, author of a Survey of the Orkney and Lewis Islands. The grandfather of Washington Irving the celebrated American writer, was born in the island of Shapinsay, and the eminent engraver of the last century, Sir Robert Strang, was born in Kirkwall.

SOIL, PRODUCE, CLIMATE, &c.—Compared with the sterile winds in some of the sister islands to the north, or even with the lofty hills and bleak marshy plains to the south, these islands gain so much that their appearance is favourable and inviting; to the eye their surface presents a rich and pleasing variety. It is conjectured by some (and there are circumstances which strongly tend to corroborate the conjecture) that these islands were, at some distant period, part of the mainland of Scotland. The hills composing the ridge that skirts the Western Ocean, as well as those that intersect the mainland, and occupy some of the other islands, are seldom single and detached, but for the most part formed into ridges of some extent, with small intervening valleys; and their tops, instead of rising high into a conical form, are generally either flat or rounded. Some few of them are almost entirely covered with verdure; the bottoms of many consist of corn fields, interspersed with patches of rich old grass, affording excellent feeding for cattle; the soil is sandy or clay loam. There are spots on some of them delightfully romantic, where the attention is arrested and the ear pleased by the murmurs of the rills, and the eye feasted on flowers that shed their fragrance around. But what is of much more consequence, Providence, ever bountiful in adding to the comforts of man, has, with no sparing hand, spread peat moss over a considerable portion of these islands. The ancient rude modes of cultivation are now abandoned, and the implements of husbandry have been materially improved, but much of the land under tillage is not regularly fenced, nor divided into separate fields. The spirit of improvement is now, however, generally diffused throughout the islands, and regular enclosures are becoming more frequent. The grain cultivated in Orkney is either oats and beans, or an inferior sort of barley. The herring fishery is considerable; the principal "stations" are Papa-Stronsay, Deersound, Holm, Burray and South Ronaldshay. The markets are Ireland, Scotland, and England, a few only being sent direct abroad from Orkney, except the produce of the early fishery, which is carried on in the neighbourhood of Stromness, and from that place the herrings are despatched direct to Hamburg. The cod and ling fisheries are also prosecuted, by various descriptions of craft, from almost all the islands. Throughout the whole of the islands rain falls in considerable quantity, especially on the western coasts; and it is supposed that the annual amount showered upon these islands averages 35"95. Snows are neither so frequent nor so heavy, but they come with comparative violence, and generally from the north-west and south east; but though what falls in the course of the year may not be much short of the quantity in other northern latitudes, it continues only a few days at a time on the surface of the earth. A peculiarity of the climate with respect to the season of snow and hail, merits some attention. Some part of the month of June, which in Britain is well known to be of a pleasant and genial warmth, is here not only colder than the preceding months, but also as much so as any month in winter; for two weeks, and even sometimes more, about the middle of June, the wind blows from the north, strong and piercing, accompanied with snow and hail showers.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—According to a survey taken by Mr. Murdo Mackenzie, in 1750, the whole number of the islands under the denomination of the Orkneys amounted to sixty-seven, of which the following twenty-nine only are inhabited:—Mainland (or Pomona), Græmsay, Hoy, Walls, Rousay, Faray, Cavay, Flotay, South Ronaldshay, Swaney, Pentland Skerry, Burray, Lambholm, Copinsay, Shapinshay, Stronsay, Papa-Stronsay, Eday, Fairey, Sanday, North Ronaldsay, Westray, Papa-Westray, Egilsay, Rousay, Weir, Enhallow, Gairsay, and Damsay; the remaining thirty-eight, which in the primitive language of the country, are termed "holms," are much inferior in size, and solely appropriated to pasturage. The Orkneys comprise twenty-six parishes; the only two towns are Kirkwall, which is the capital and a royal burgh, and Stromness, a burgh of barony. The isles of Orkney and Shetland form one sheriffdom or stewartry, under a sheriff-depute, whose authority extends over all: but he has a substitute resident in Orkney, and another in Shetland, by whom the duties are principally performed. Combined they form one county, under the title of the County of Orkney and Shetland, which returns one member to the imperial parliament. Kirkwall, the capital of the Orkneys, is a representative burgh, joining with Wick, Dornock, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty, in sending another member. The county is represented by Samuel Laing, Esq. of Crook; and the burghs by John Pender, Esq. The aggregate area of the Orkney Isles is about 3[illegible],147 acres. The population in 1871 was 31,274—14,355 males, and 16,919 females; and in 1861, 32,395

KIRKWALL

AND THE NORTH ISLES.

KIRKWALL, the capital of the Orkney Islands and of the United parishes of Kirkwall and Saint Ola, is a town of great antiquity, a royal burgh, and the seat of a synod and presbytery; 353 miles from Edinburgh by land, and 211 by water; 58 from Wick, 54 from Thurso, 41 from Huna Ferry (the most northerly part of Great Britain), and 14¼ from Stromness; situate about the centre of an island, called, by way of pre-eminence, Mainland, or Pomona, and on the south-east of the bay of Kirkwall. The town bears strong characteristics of antiquity; the principal street is exceedingly narrow, being in some places barely wide enough to afford passage for a cart; the houses are generally arranged with their gables towards the street, which gives the town a singular appearance: many of these houses, both externally and internally, present striking features of old age—the doors and windows are small, the walls of great thickness, and the apartments narrow and gloomy. The modern dwellings, however, form an exception to this style and many of them vie with the most commodious habitations of any other place of the same extent in Scotland. A rivulet, which is crossed by a stone bridge of one arch, passes through the town. The most conspicuous building in Kirkwall is the Cathedral of St. Magnus; it was founded by Ronald, Earl of Orkney, 1138, in honour of and dedicated to his uncle, St. Magnus, and, though the work of different ages, and brought to completion under various superintendence, must be admitted to be an edifice, not only grand and simple, but also surprisingly regular and uniform, and is a most imposing ornamental object of pride to these northern islands. A short distance from the cathedral is a large and handsome church belonging to the United Presbyterians, and near it is the Free church. There is also a Congregational church. The ancient church of St. Ola, which is believed to have existed prior to the foundation of that of St. Magnus, and was then the only religious establishment, stood near the shore of the road or bay of Kirkwall. Around its site many of the houses are of such antiquated appearance and construction as to allow of the conjecture that these dwellings, from their situation, originally obtained the appellation of Kirkjovauger, or the "Kirk on the bay," subsequently corrupted to Kirkwall. Opposite the cathedral, on the west side of the street, were the ruins of a fortress, called the "King's castle," which time and the havoc of war had nearly levelled; it was a place of considerable strength in 1581, when, or soon after, it was occupied by the Earl of Orkney, natural son of James V. The remains were cleared away during the latter part of 1865, and a new street formed, called Castle street, leading to Harbour street. To the south of the cathedral are the remains of the ancient palace of the Bishops of Orkney, and almost adjoining to these are the ruins of the Earl's Palace, built by Earl Patrick Stewart, about the beginning of the seventeenth century.

Kirkwall was created a royal burgh, in the first instance, by James III., and its charter was renewed by James V.; its government is confided to a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, a dean of guild, and eight councillors; it is a representative burgh, and unites with Tain, Wick, Dornoch, Dingwall, and Cromarty, in returning one member to parliament, John Pender, Esq. The Town Hall is divided into apartments for a common prison and a court of justice, with a room for council meetings. The quarter sessions are held on the first Wednesday in January, April, July and October; the sheriff's court is open every Thursday during the sitting of the supreme court, and oftener when necessary. The sheriff's and commissary courts are held in Kirkwall, the synod of Orkney holds its meetings, and the sheriff's small debts court is held here

The harbour of Kirkwall is safe and commodious; it has two excellent piers, and a beautiful iron pier about 300 feet long, built on screw piles, was erected in 1866, at a cost of £10,490—enabling steamers and other vessels to come to the pier head at all times of the tide; the outer bay affords good anchorage ground; altogether the situation of the place is well adapted for the resort of shipping. The making of kelp occupies many persons, and the trade in timber is of some consequence. There are three branch banking establishments, and two hotels. Kirkwall sustains several educational establishments, including an academy or grammar school, and others on charitable foundation or instituted by societies. The Orkney Hospital was founded by John Balfour, Esq., of Trenabie, for the relief of the sick, and as an asylum for a certain number of aged, infirm persons, who are attended gratuitously by the faculty of Kirkwall. The Kirkwall fair was at one time famed for the extent of its business and the number of merchants and others attending from various distant places, and it has been compared to the celebrated Leipsic fair on a smaller scale. It is held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of August, and continues during that week and the one succeeding; but the business is now comparatively trifling. There is also a horse and cattle market held on the first Monday in every month. The population of Kirkwall and St. Ola in 1871 numbered 4,261. Of the north isles, Sandy contained 953 inhabitants; Rossay and Egilsbay, 1,001; Shapinsbay, 941; South Ronalshay, 2,228; Stronsay and Eddy, 2,210; and Westray and Papa-Westray, 2,460

Is a burgh of barony and sea-port, 14¾ miles from Kirkwall, situated, as that town is, on the mainland (or Pomona Island) of the Orkneys, adjoining the sound of Hoy, opposite Græmsay Island. This place, which has risen within the last century from being a fishing hamlet, composed of a few shattered huts, to a populous town, owes its increase to its admirable harbour and convenient position, by which it is rendered a place of safe resort, in these stormy seas, to vessels trading with the north of the eastern or western hemispheres. Its harbour is a fine natural basin, extending from south to north more than a mile, and is sheltered from the Atlantic on the west by a high ridge of moorish ground, the southern extremity of which forms the north side of Hoy Sound; while its entrance is protected partly by the island of Græmsay, which lies midway in the sound, and partly by a ness or point of land which stretches from the westward. On the east side it is defended by two small islands or holms which extend along the back of it; and even beyond these, in a sort of outer harbour or roadstead, there is excellent anchorage for shipping. It was formerly no uncommon thing in the spring months to see in these havens upwards of fifty large vessels on their way to the whale fishery in Davis Straits and Greenland; they called here for the purpose of completing their complement of men, which was generally about twenty for each ship. In some years there were upwards of seven hundred men furnished from this port to Davis Straits, besides one hundred and fifty apprentices; these are now reduced to about one hundred and fifty men and boys. Lobster fishing is carried on extensively and profitably. About five hundred men are engaged in the herring fishery, and employed by the Hudson's Bay Company, who have a resident agent. In this harbour captains may be supplied with necessaries to prosecute their voyage; and for repairs of vessels most efficient and expeditious means are afforded by a patent slip. To Mr. Stanger the port is indebted for this important additional accommodation. The machinery of the slip is of the most substantial description, and by it a ship of seven hundred tons can be taken into the yard. A very extensive warehouse is situated at the north end of the town; and there is an excellent pier, with eighteen feet of water at spring tides. Boat and ship building is carried on. Branches respectively of the National, the Commercial, and the Union Bank of Scotland are established here, and there are two principal inns. The Orkney Natural History Society's Museum contains Hugh Miller's celebrated Asterolepis, and many other specimens of much interest, and has been enriched by assortments from the collection of the late Dr. Baikie.

Stromness is a very irregularly built town, the habitations having been erected without any regard to uniformity of arrangement, and generally as near the sea as possible; some are even within flood mark, and protected by bulwarks, quays, and jetties, which each individual appears to have constructed as suited his own convenience and taste. Stromness is an independent burgh of barony by a charter held from the Crown, granted in 1817, when the government was vested in two bailies and nine councillors. The market days are first Wednesday of each month. An annual fair, held on the second Tuesday in September, continues for a week. A lead and silver mine, which was worked during the last century, is about to be again opened. The streets have recently been paved, and there are gas works in the town. The population in 1871 was 2,463.

POST OFFICE, STROMNESS, Elizabeth Sinclair, Post Mistress.—Letters from the South arrive daily during the summer at twelve noon, and during the winter at two afternoon.

THE SHETLAND ISLES,

OR ZETLAND ISLES—a group of islands, islets, and rocks, situated in the Northern Ocean, about fifteen leagues north-east of the Orkneys, and forty-four west of Bergen, in Norway; lying between 50 degs. 48 mins. 30 secs., and 60 degs. 52 mins. north latitude, and between 1 deg. 52 secs. and 1 deg. 57 mins. west longitude from London. There are three principal islands in the group, namely, Mainland, Yell (on the north), and (still farther north-east) Unst; on the east of Yell lies Fetlar, which is the largest of the inferior islands, the lochs of which are famous for trout, and several of the other islands abound with seal, otter, and wild fowl. The next island in point of size is Bressay; the smaller ones are Whalray, Out Skerries, Samphray, Big Island, Mickle Roe, Papa Stour, House, Barray, Trondray, besides a great number of islets, holms, and skerries. The history of Shetland is so much involved in that of Orkney as to render an enlarged notice of its early history unnecessary. That the Romans visited the coasts of Shetland is highly probable, from the coins of that people which have been discovered—those of Galba, Vespasian, Trajan, and Ælius Caesar; and the remains of a small Roman camp are to be traced on the island of Fetlar. There seems to be little doubt but these islands were first inhabited by the Norwegians, the laws having been administered by "Udallers," who acted as a sort of petty princes. In the year 875, Harold Harfager, or the "Fair-haired," subdued these islands, and gave them to Count Sigurd, who was the first Earl of Orkney, from whom sprang the true Scandinavian dynasties of the Earls of Orkney and Shetland—the latter country being at first too insignificant to be included in the title, although it was included in the grant. On the cession of the Zetland Isles to the Scottish crown, the laws of the former were gradually encroached upon by the oppressive endeavours of the Scotch earls to introduce feudal subjection and seigniorage in place of the ancient udal tenures. From 1468, when a marriage was concerted between the Scotish monarch, James III. and the Princess of Denmark (when Orkney and Shetland were pledged to the royal husband), to the time when the two countries passed to the English crown, in the persons of Charles I. and II., and afterwards to the Earl of Morton (who sold the estate to Sir Lawrence Dundas), nothing occurs relating to the possession of Shetland distinct from that which has been already noticed in Orkney.

SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The general aspect of the country is bleak and barren; and although there is but little to attract in the form of landscape in what may be called the interior of the islands—the whole of them being destitute of wood—their coast scenery presents views of a highly interesting character; and the summer tourist who may be content to leave behind for a while the rich luxuriance of an English landscape and take a peep at nature in her more wild and romantic guise, will find, in the diversified appearance and picturesque grandeur of the coast of Shetland, ample gratification. The want of roads has been much felt by the inhabitants of Shetland, but government are obviating this inconvenience by constructing roads between the principal inhabited parts; and where this means of communication does not exist, boats are called into use on the numerous fine "voes" which penetrate far into the interior. In travelling by land, the small ponies, or "shelties" as they are called, pursue their way across the wastes without much difficulty. The cattle of Shetland are of a very diminutive breed. A cow is said to weigh from two to three hundred weight upon an average; an ox from three to four, but seldom exceeding five hundred weight. A great abundance of poultry is kept on almost every farm, and small swine are very numerous. The sheep are very small, but produce wool of an excellent quality, which is knit into stockings, gloves, and mits. The fleece, which is remarkaby soft, has been wrought into stockings of a fine texture. The precarious and scanty corn harvest of Shetland is rarely finished until the end of October or even of November. The fuel in general use is peat, the cutting and drying of which occupies diligent attention. The highest land in these islands is Roeness Hill, which attains an elevation of one thousand, four hundred and forty-seven feet. The Hill of Foula is next in altitude, being about one thousand three hundred feet above the level of the sea. The chief support of the Zetlander is dependent on the white fishery—herring, cod, and ling abounding on these coasts; besides which, many men and boys are employed every season in the Davis Straits whale fishery. Several persons are also engaged in angling for the small fry of the coal fish, or gadus carbonarius—known in Shetland by the name of "sethe." These swarm in myriads within the numerous creeks and sounds of this northern archipelago. They first appear in May, scarcely more than an inch long. About August they become more abundant, measuring about eight inches in length, and in the early part of the following year they attain the ordinary size of the cod fish. A profitable fishery then takes place in deep tide-ways, supplying the inhabitants with a portion of food and oil from the livers for light and other purposes.

The Shetland Isles form twelve parochial divisions, composing two presbyteries and a synod. The only town in this portion of the northern group is Lerwick; besides it, there are only a few villages and hamlets on the shores. The islands now pay their proportion of the land tax, and in every other respect have become subject to British laws. They are represented in Parliament (as already noticed) in connection with the Orkneys, to which sheriffdom they belong. The acreage is estimated at 208,579; the number of inhabited houses in 1871 was 5,667, and the population 31,608, namely, 13,103 males and 18,505 females. In 1861 the numbers amounted to 31,670.

LERWICK, SCALLOWAY, &c.

LERWICK, the principal town in Shetland, is (by steam) 272 miles from Edinburgh, 165 from Peterhead (Aberdeenshire), 126 from Wick, and 95 from Kirkwall, situate on the east coast of Mainland, or the largest island of the group. It bears the name of the bay upon whose margin it is built; and that, in its turn, derives its name from a long, narrow inlet on the opposite shore of the island of Bressay, called Lera-voe, and remarkable for its extensive deposit of clay and mud; a projecting point at the entrance to Lera-voe is called Lera-ness; and the whole bay, including the roadstead of Bressay sound, is named Lerwick, which signifies the "bay of clay", or "mud"—compounded of islandic leir, Danish leir (clay, mud), and Suio-Gothic wik, Danish, vig, vilg (an arm of the sea, an anchorage). The site of the town, comprising a lunated segment of the sea shore of nearly half a mile in length, and becoming gradually more elevated as it recedes from the coast line, presents the appearance of a perfect amphitheatre, and, when viewed from the opposite anchorage the effect is singularly picturesque. The principal street extends through the whole length of the town, following the curvature of the sea shore, and numerous lanes and closes, constructed at right angles with it, lead to a spacious road on the eminence above the town. The houses are built of a species of grey sandstone, which abounds in the immediate vicinity, and which is both of considerable beauty and great durability, and in general they are far superior to those of the sister town of Kirkwall, in Orkney; but here, as in Kirkwall, the houses (with the exception of those very recently erected) seem to have dropped by accident into their respective localities, their owners apparently being indifferent whether fronts or backs, gables or corners, were planted towards the street; in several places, also, the buildings project so far into the main street that there is scarcely room for a carriage to pass. The more offensive of these obstructions are, however, being gradually removed. The principal public buildings are the Town House, Fort Charlotte, the Parish and other churches, and Subscription Rooms; the first of these is an old structure, containing a hall for the meeting of the commissioners of supply (also used as a masonic lodge). Fort Charlotte stands on a rocky eminence at the northern extremity of the town; its guns command the whole range of the anchorage, from the south to the north entrance of the harbour. It was originally built in the reign of Charles II., but having been dismantled and allowed to fall into a state of dilapidation, it was rebuilt in 1781, and received the name it now bears in honour of the consort of George III. It is at present used as a training establishment for the Royal Naval Reserve. The Parish church stands above the town, towards its southern extremity; it is a substantial building, with a Doric front of hewn stone; but in consequence of the flatness of its roof, and the want of a spire, its external appearance is somewhat ponderous; internally, however, it is tastefully and commodiously fitted up. The Free church is a handsome modern building, neatly fitted up. There are several other places of worship, substantial and commodious structures, of which a list, with their ministers, is appended. The subscription rooms, which are in the centre of the town, and occupy the site of the old church, besides various smaller apartments, contain three rooms of thirty feet by twenty, two of which are occupied as schoolrooms, and the other as a public reading room or newsroom, where strangers have the privilege of consulting newspapers and other publications. Lerwick is a burgh of barony, having its municipal government vested in two bailies and nine councillors, with a separate board of police, all of whom are elected by the burgesses. A sheriff small debt court is held every Thursday, and a bailie court is held as occasion requires. The justices of the peace, the commissioners of supply, and the provincial synod of Shetland also hold their meetings in Lerwick. The trade of this town is much more extensive than the amount of population would indicate. There are shops in almost all the houses on both sides of the principal street; and the mercantile business which is transacted in some of the establishments here would be considered important in many a city in the kingdom. Almost the whole produce of Shetland, consisting of salted fish, beef, oil, butter and hosiery, passes to market through the merchants of Lerwick; and, in like manner, by them are imported nearly all the groceries, spirits and manufactured goods used throughout the islands. The harbour of Lerwick (or Bressay sound, as it is frequently called) is one of the most spacious, secure and commodious havens in the British Empire. It is bounded on the east by the island of Bressay and on the west by Mainland, having an entrance from the south and another from the north. Its extent may be inferred from the fact that, on more than one occasion, a fleet of upwards of ninety sail of war ships has anchored in it. Branches of the Commercial, Union and the National Banks of Scotland are established here. The population of Lerwick in 1871 was 4,180.

SCALLOWAY is a seaport village in the parish of Tingwall, eight miles from Lerwick, situated on the north side of a fine bay on the west side of Mainland. Anciently this was the capital of Shetland, but in proportion as Lerwick has increased in importance Scalloway has retrograded. Near the village are the ruins of Scallow Castle, erected in 1600 by Patrick Stewart, Earl of Orkney and Shetland. The inhabitants chiefly subsist by the herring fishery, and for facilitating the pursuit of this branch there is a large quay and extensive warehouse, cooperage, &c. In the spring of the year "hoaf" fishing for cod and ling is also successfully resorted to. The men of Scalloway are of a very fearless character, and frequently put to sea in such boisterous and stormy weather as would deter the most experienced and intrepid seamen of other quarters. They are also a very industrious and persevering race; some have feued ground, and have erected houses for themselves. The Parish church stands three miles from the village, at the head of a fine fresh water loch; and there is a neat Chapel of Ease in the village, erected by the late Rev. John Turnbull. On the west shore is a spring of very excellent water, the flow from which is uninfluenced by the seasons, being constant and abundant; it is covered by the sea at high water. Not far distant is "Gallows Hill," so called from its having formerly been the place of execution. The last who suffered on the spot are said to have been two unfortunate females, who fell a sacrifice to superstition in the seventeenth century for the alleged crime of witchcraft. The parish of Tingwall numbered in 1871 2,491 inhabitants.

PEEBLES-SHIRE,

OR TWEEDDALE, a county in the southern part of Scotland, is bounded on the north and north-east by Edinburghshire, on the east and south-east by Selkirkshire, on the south by Dumfries-shire, and by the county of Lanark for almost the whole extent of its western border. In length, from its southern border to its extreme northern apex, it measures full thirty miles; from west to east, including the parts on the latter boundary that mingle with Selkirkshire, its breadth is upwards of twenty miles, whilst in other parts it varies from ten to fifteen miles. Its form is exceedingly irregular, and the contents of its area have been variously computed; the government returns of 1861 state the area in square miles to be three hundred and fifty six.

NAME AND EARLY HISTORY.—The shire derives its present title from the county town, and Tweeddale from being the district in which the Tweed has its source, and the vale through which it pursues its course to the east. The Gadenii tribe of Britons, who inhabited this secluded territory on the Tweed, have left innumerable traces of their residence, demonstrated in the names of places, druidic and warlike remains, and sepulchral tumuli. The Romans were the first people who broke in upon the British aborigines in the district; after the abdication of the Roman power, the Gadenii naturally associated with the kindred Britons of Strathclyde; and the descendants of those early settlers continued here throughout the Pictish period, and until the fortunes of the Scottish kings prevailed in 974. From the epoch of the migration of the Strathclyde Britons, in the ninth century, the Scoto-Irish intermingled with the remaining Britons on the upper Tweed. The next and last class of intruders on the district were the Anglo-Saxons, from Lothian, who ultimately prevailed, and finally established a settlement in the shire. One of the chiefs of this people, called Eadulph, settled in the vale of Edleston water, to which, with the village, he communicated his name; in this manner those of Saxon lineage founded the families of rank in Peebles-shire. At different times the county suffered in a small degree from the inroads of marauders from the English side of the borders, a circumstance which had the effect of keeping the people long in the exercise and possession of warlike weapons. At Philiphaugh, some of the heads of the best families fell, or were taken prisoners, fighting on the side of royalty; but in the insurrection of 1679, in the West of Scotland, which was ended by the battle of Bothwell Bridge, there were not a dozen persons natives of Tweeddale. Since these stirring events neither the county nor its inhabitants have been in any way prominent in the scenes of history.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &C.—The country is an uninterrupted series of hill and mountain ranges, so close upon each other that there is scarcely to be found a plain of moderate dimensions in the district, and not one of any kind unless upon the margin of the Tweed or its tributaries. Notwithstanding the attempts made by several individuals to encourage new and better modes of agriculture, till within the last seventy years the management of arable farms was in a deplorably low condition; but within the last fifty years particularly, draining, ploughing, and planting have been carried on most effectually, and the general features of the country highly improved. The sides and summits of the hills are, at the present time, here and there clothed with exuberant plantations; and the great vale of the district, and its minor valleys, are now well cultivated, enclosed and divided; rich arable fields have taken the place of unproductive swamps, and are rapidly advancing up the sides of the hills. The elevations for so small a county are very numerous, and some of them of considerable altitude; the following are the most conspicuous in height above the level of the sea:—Hartfield, 2,916 feet; Broad Law, 2,850; Dollar Law, 2,840; Scrape, 2,560; Gums Cleugh, 2,200; Dundroich, Pykestane, and Hell's Cleugh, each 2,100; Cardon, 2,000; Cairn Hill, 1,800; Broughton Heights, 1,483; and Meigle, 1,480. It appears that about fifty years ago the amount of stock in the shire was 1,126 horses, 5,060 cattle, and 112,800 sheep; since that period the numbers have greatly increased. Little can be said of the minerals of the county. At the north-east extremity of the shire coal is found, but at too great a distance to be of advantage to the general population; the county is in the same predicament as to freestone, and the houses are nearly all built of blue whinstone. At Stobbo there is a valuable quarry of blue slate; limestone and marl are plentiful, and ironstone is found in some parts of the district. Peebles-shire is almost devoid of manufactures, except at Peebles and Innerleithen, where there are several mills for the manufacture of tweeds and shawls. It is remarkable that there is so little manufacturing industry displayed, when it is considered what a superiority the district possesses in the purity and fall of its waters, which make it altogether a most advantageous site for the establishment of paper and spinning mills, as well as general manufactories.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The principal river is the Tweed, distinguished as the fourth of Scottish streams; the upper sources of this beautiful water are found in the parish of Tweedsmuir, in this county; it is enriched by many tributaries, and after passing the ancient town of Berwick, falls into the German Ocean. The other rivers are the Lyne, the Leithen, and the Manow, all of which are subsidiary to the Tweed, and the Leggett, which runs into St. Mary's Loch, in Selkirkshire. In the rivers and small lakes there are abundance of salmon and trout, and a lake called the "West Water Loch," is noted for the quantity of eels with which it swarms. The railway from Peebles to Edinburgh is the North British; the one from Symington to Peebles, the Caledonian. There is also a railway to Innerleithen, and a line from thence to Galashiels. There is also a railway to Linton (properly called West Linton), to distinguish it from East Linton, in Haddingtonshire.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—When the country began to be divided into sheriffdoms, about the twelfth century, Tweeddale was put under the jurisdiction of two sheriffs, of whom one was settled at Traquair, the other at Peebles. Peebles-shire, from its connection with the ancient kingdom of Strathclyde, became naturally a part of the diocese of Glasgow, in which it continued till the dissolution of Episcopacy. The shire now comprises fourteen parishes, and two parts of parishes; it contains one royal burgh—Peebles, but possesses no representative burgh; the county at large, however, returns one member to the imperial parliament, the present member (1877) being Sir Graham Graham Montgomery, Bart. The acreage of the county is 226,899. The population in 1871 numbered 12,330, comprising 5,955 males and 6,375 females; the number of inhabited houses at the same date was 2,187. In 1861 the population was 11,408.

INNERLEITHEN, WALKERBURN AND TRAQUAIR.

INNERLEITHEN (or Inverleithen) is a parish and village—the latter, respectable and pleasant, is 28 miles S. from Edinburgh, 16 N.W. from Selkirk, 12 W. from Galashiels, and 6 E. from Peebles, situated near the mouth of the Leithen, within a quarter of a mile of the left bank of the Tweed, and environed on the east and west by high and partly wooded hills. Upon the banks of the Leithen are several large woollen manufactories, the powerful machinery of which is propelled by the stream, and the works employ a considerable number of hands. Tweeds, shawls and tartans are here made in great perfection. The celebrity and some of the prosperity of the village are derived from the number of visitors who resort hither to a salubrious mineral spring, possessing properties similar in effect to the waters of Harrogate, and found eminently beneficial in cases of scrofulous disorders, inflammations of the eyes, and various diseases originating in impurity of the blood. The spring is much frequented in the summer, particularly by families from Edinburgh, for whose accommodation there are a number of substantial houses, forming a neat small street along the public road, with a variety of houses behind, let as private furnished lodgings. A well-house was erected in 1826, containing subscription reading rooms, which are supplied with newspapers and a select library; there are branches of the Union Bank of Scotland and of the Bank of Scotland and a savings bank. The village is well lighted with gas. Additional celebrity has been imparted to this place by Sir Walter Scott, in the publication of his novel called "St. Ronan's Well," of which this spot is supposed to be the scene. An excellent inn here has adopted the title of the novel. About three miles west, situated on a knoll, may be seen the ruins of Horsbrugh Castle, one of the range of border peel-towers, anciently possessed of much grandeur and strength. It is spoken of by Armstrong as being habitable in 1775.

Between Innerleithen and Walkerburn are Purves Hill Terraces. They are planted with ash trees, but their contour may easily be made out; they vary from about 50 feet to about 120 feet in breadth, and the second in the ascent is over 900 feet in length; the depth between each terrace is about 14 feet. On the range of these terraces was situated Purves Hill Tower, but a few stones only remain to attest its site. Some fifty years ago, an association was instituted, styled the "St. Ronan's Border Club." If was composed of a great number of gentlemen connected with all parts of the country, under whose auspices was held an annual festival for the exhibition of olympic and border games and gymnastic exercises. Though the club is now extinct, the exhibition still takes place, the day of competition being usually in August. The places of worship are Established and Free churches—one for each, a Presbyterian chapel, and one for Independents. There are schools in connection with the churches. This parish, which embraces an area of 23,981 acres, contained in 1871 a population of 2,812; of that number the village had 1,605.

WALKERBURN, a mile and a half distant, is a small village in the above parish. It contains two large woollen mills, a subscription school, and a sub-post office. Population in 1871, 802.

TRAQUAIR is a parish on the south bank of the Tweed, and watered also by the river Quair; it lies opposite to Innerleithen, with which place a communication has been opened by means of a fine modern bridge thrown across the Tweed. The general appearance of the parish is mountainous; in it are Gumscleugh and Minchmoor, lofty eminences lying on the road to Selkirk. The old mansion-house of Traquair, is delightfully situated on the banks of the Tweed, where that river and the Quair unite; and on the side of the hill overlooking the lawn is the "Bush aboon Traquair" (the subject of the celebrated ballad), pointed out by a few birch trees, the remains of a thicket or arbour, once the seat of pastoral love. Traquair House originally had a tower situated at the north-east corner, believed to have been erected before the year 900. Large additions were made to the tower by the first Earl of Traquair. There is an Established church and a chapel for Roman Catholics. Traquair parish, which embraces an area of 15,327 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 669.

LINTON,

NEWLANDS, NOBLEHOUSE, ROMANNO BRIDGE, CARLOPS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LINTON, or WEST LINTON, as it is sometimes called to distinguish it from East Linton, in Haddingtonshire, is a parish and village; the latter, which is irregularly built, is 16 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 14 N.W. from Peebles, and 11 N.N.E. from Biggar, situated on the banks of the Lyne water. Besides this stream the parish is watered by the North Esk; and although the greater part of the district is hilly yet it is fertile, and famed for its excellent sheep pasturage. A church of the Establishment, one for the congregation of United Presbyterians, and one for the Episcopalians are the places of worship. Linton confers the title of baron upon the family of Traquair. A branch of the Bank of Scotland and a savings bank are established in the village, and there are several good schools. The parish comprises an area of 23,256 statute acres, and its population in 1871 was 1387, of this number 514 were returned for the village.

NEWLANDS is a parish lying between Linton and Eddlestone, watered by the Lyne and a small tributary stream called the Tarth. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and the hills are mostly green, without heath. Trees thrive in every part of the parish, and the greater part is enclosed by hedgerows and fences. The parish church, a small but neat edifice, is situated on the left bank of the Lyne water; and at the confluence of that stream with the Tarth stand the ruins of Drochil Castle, once a large structure, partly erected by the Regent Morton, and left unfinished when he was put to death on the scaffold. Acreage of the parish 12,518; population in 1871, 851.

NOBLEHOUSE, in Newlands parish, was formerly known by an inn in which the trustees of the turnpike roads used to assemble. These meetings are now transferred to the County Hall, Peebles. The seat ROMANNO, in the parish, was at the end of the seventeenth century the property and residence of Dr. Alexander Pennycuick, the author of some clever poems and a poetical "Description of Tweeddale," a district of which he was a native.

CARLOPS, in Linton parish, is a small village, situate on the northern verge of the county, about three miles from Linton. It originated in the year 1784, and takes its name from some localities in the neighbourhood called "Carling loups," in allusion to a witch or carling who, it is said, "kept the country side in fear," in those parts, and whose traditionary character, it is asserted, furnished to Ramsay the idea of "Manse" in his pastoral of the "Gentle Shepherd."

PEEBLES,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF EDDLESTON, BROUGHTON, GLENHOLM, AND KILBUCHO, DRUMMELZIER, KIRKURD, LYNE AND MEGGET, MANOR, SKIRLING, STOBO, TWEEDSMUIR, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

PEEBLES is an ancient royal burgh, the capital of its county and parish, and the seat of a presbytery; 22 miles S. from Edinburgh, the same distance W. by N. from Selkirk, 54 N.N.E. from Dumfries, and 47 E. by S. from Glasgow. It is situate in the centre of the parish, on a beautiful and large plain, having the Tweed running along its southern side, and the Peebles (or Eddleston) waters along its northern limit, surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills, and its vicinage is adorned by numerous thriving plantations and elegant mansions. Among the latter, King's Meadows, Kerfield, Venlaw, and Rosetta are the most conspicuous as modern seats. Sir Adam Hay, Bart. of Haystoune and King's Meadows, who is the principal proprietor of the parish, has thrown over the Tweed, in a romantic glen, about a mile below the town, an elegant wire bridge, which is much admired. The name of the town has been spelt several ways at different periods—Peblys, Peblis and Peeblis—and the present authography is of no older date than the last century. For a long period Peebles has consisted of two towns, respectively called New and Old; the former occupies the ridge of a peninsula projected westward, along the northern side of which flows the Eddleston before mentioned, over which is a bridge forming a communication with the Old Town, which lies on the face of sloping ground. The Eddleston water, by a bend round the head of the peninsula, falls into the Tweed, over which there is another bridge of five arches, which has been widened and greatly improved. The town is neat and clean, and the streets and principal shops are lighted with gas by a joint-stock company. Since the opening of the railway between here and Edinburgh, and the Caledonian Company's branch from Symington, a vast number of visitors from thence and more distant places, have made this place their residence in summer, which has materially assisted to promote its prosperity; some very tasteful villas have been erected for private residence, as well as to accommodate the numerous visitors. Of the public buildings, independent of those for divine worship, the most conspicuous, either in repect to magnitude or architectural prominence, are the County and Town Halls, in which assemblies and other meetings are held, and the Public Schools. As a town profiting by manufactures or external trade, Peebles takes a station inferior to many towns of less magnitude, and not so happily favoured by situation. Formerly the manufacture of woollen and serges was carried on to some extent, and at the beginning of the present century that of fine cotton cloths was introduced; but these branches have gone to decay. There are mills for grinding flour and meal, propelled by water from the Tweed; a brewery, a tannery, woollen mills, and several good inns, the principal being the Toutine. The Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Company's Bank, the Union Bank of Scotland, have each a branch here; and there is also a Savings Bank. A newspaper is published here weekly, the "Peebles-shire Advertiser and County Newspaper," which has a good circulation.

The Chambers Institution is a fine building in High street, containing a library of 13,000 volumes, a reading room, museum, or gallery of art, comprising many rare specimens from the museums of the Vatican, the Louvre, the British Museum, the Royal Institution Academy, Edinburgh, the students of Mr. D. Bruce.ana, London, and Mr. J. Annan, Ed.nburgh, and other collections. Within the edifice is also a large hall for lectures and exhibitions, and a county museum. This valuable property was presented to the burgh by Mr. William Chambers, of the eminent firm of W. & R. Chambers, whose names have been so long and honourably associated with the cheap literature of the country. A native of Peebles, Mr. Chambers always evinced a lively interest in the well-being of the burgh, and as a la-ting and substantial proof of his desire for its material and intellectual advancement, purchased the building known as Queensbury Lodge, and at considerable expense had it remodelled so as to form the above useful and ornamental pile. In the quadrangle of the Institution stands the old cross of Peebles, which was restored to the burgh by Sir Adam Hay, Bart, after a sojourn of half a century at King's Meadows.

It is not satisfactorily ascertained at what period Peebles was erected a royal burgh; Alexander III. was a munificent patron of it, and its original charter is supposed to have been bestowed by that monarch; succeeding kings recognised its right to the distinction, amongst whom was James VI. whose charter granted to the burgesses an extensive range of landed property and right of common in different parts, nearly the whole of which has been lost to the inhabitants. The government is invested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, seven councillors, and town clerk. A sheriff court is held on Tuesday and Thursday, and a sheriff small debt court every Friday; general meetings of the commissioners of supply, road trustees and freeholders of the shire take place here in the months of April and September, and the meetings of lieutenancy as occasion requires. A poorhouse has recently been erected on the Rosetta road; the situation is well chosen. The Royal Company of Archers, or King's body-guard for Scotland, come to Peebles from Edinburgh occasionally, attired in the ancient and elegant dress of the bowmen of Scotia, to shoot for the old established prize of a silver arrow, given by the burgh to the most successful marksman.

The places of worship are for those of the Established church, the Free church, Episcopalians, United Presbyterians and Roman Catholics; the last named on the Rosetta road, was erected in 1858, by the exertions of the Rev. J. Clapperton, aided by numerous friends. The Free church is a neat Gothic building, and the Episcopal chapel is finished in a superior style, and embellished with a beautiful window of stained glass. There are several friendly societies, and several excellent schools, both public and private; for the latter this town has been long and deservedly celebrated, with respect both to the method of instruction and the salubrity of their situation. The ruins of the two ancient churches are still extant, one of which was dedicated to St. Mary, the other built by Alexander III. in the middle of the thirteenth century, and dedicated to the Holy Cross and St. Nicholas; the same monarch erected, likewise, a house contiguous for himself, which continued a royal residence until the accession of James VI. to the throne of England. Among the objects in the town and neighbourhood which generally attract attention is Nidpath Castle, a noble ruin, looking down upon the town and the Tweed from a romantic glen, about a mile distant to the west. The building is a massive tower, and, with its interesting site and localities, is the delight of the draughtsman. This locality is much resorted to in summer for its excellent trout and salmon fishing. Half a mile to the east of the town, on a hill called Janet's Brae, may be discerned the traces of two ancient British camps. The market is held on Tuesday, and the fairs on the second Tuesday in January; the first Tuesday in March (for hiring servants); the second Wednesday in May, and the first first Tuesday after the 18th of July (for wool); the Tuesday next before the 24th of August, the Tuesday before the 12th of September, the second Tuesday in October, and the Tuesday before the 12th of December. The parish of Peebles has an area of 16,597 statute acres, and by the returns for 1871 had a population numbering 3,172, of which the town contained 2,631.

EDDLESTON (or Eddlestone), is a parish and village—the latter four miles north from Peebles, situated on both sides of the Eddleston water, which takes its rise from various springs on the north and north-east boundaries, and at Cowey's Linn forms a cascade of thirty-five feet high. The South Esk has also its source out of a small lake within two miles of the village. Anciently the kirk and its small hamlet stood among the hills to the east, where some vestiges of them still survive the depreciation of time. The church of the present village is a modern building with a school attached. Acreage, 18,490; population in 1871, 700.

BROUGHTON, GLENHOLM, and KILBUCHO are incorporated and contiguous parishes, agricultural and pastoral. The village of Broughton stands on the road from Edinburgh to Dumfries, and from Peebles to Biggar, and is remarkable for its neatness. A branch of the Caledonian Railway from Symington to Preston passes through the parish. There is a church of the Establishment belonging to the united parishes; acreage, 18,065; population in 1871, 720.

DRUMMELZIER (pronounced Drumellyer) is a parish in the south-western part of the county, lying on the east bank of the Tweed, where also stands Drummelzier Castle, formerly a seat of the once powerful family of Tweedie. It is surrounded by some beautiful grounds, and is the last of a chain of fortresses placed on the banks of the Tweed, which are seen every two or three miles in pursuing the course of the stream. The parish church stands on the Powsail rivulet, a little way above its junction with the Tweed. Acreage, 17,948; population in 1871, 221.

KIRKURD parish lies on the western confines of the county, and is bounded on the north by the Tarth, a tributary of the Tweed. From the first-named river the land rises in finely cultivated and enclosed grounds, and then becomes hilly, with eminences covered with thriving plantations. The ancient church of Kirkurd belonged at an early period to the bishops of Glasgow, one of whom gave it to the hospital of Solta, the property of which charitable institution it remained until transferred to the hospital of Trinity Church, Edinburgh. Acreage, 5,968; population in 1871, 294.

LYNE and MEGGET are two parishes ecclesiastically united, though not adjacent to each other. Lyne lies on the left bank of the stream of that name, while Megget is situated within the southern border of the county, near the head of Elbeck and Yarrow. It is a bleak, hilly, and pastoral district, intersected by the small stream Megget water, which falls into Saint Mary's Loch. Acreage, 17,227; population in 1871, 174.

MANOR parish is bounded by Peebles on the north and Megget on the south, and its northern extremity abuts on the Tweed. The district is the vale of the Manor water, which rises in its southern hilly quarter and falls into the Tweed about two miles west of Peebles. The parish formerly belonged to the rector of Peebles, and is supposed to derive its name from being the Manor of that churchman. Several curiosities exist in this locality: among these the remains of a Roman camp, a tower raised on an eminence, supposed to have been erected as a watch-tower in early troublous times, and a huge upright stone, of great age, perforated with many holes. But the greatest attraction is, perhaps, the cottage once inhabited by the late David Ritchie, a deformed and eccentric dwarf, from whom, it is said, Sir Walter Scott drew the fictitious character of the "Black Dwarf," in his novel of that name. The cottage is situated in the vale near the public road at the farm steading called Woodhouse. Acreage, 16,622; population in 1871, 271.

SKIRLING is a small parish and village—the latter twenty-five miles west by south from Edinburgh, and two and a half north-west from Broughton, situated on the road from the city named to Leadhills. The parish is bounded on the north-east by Kirkurd, on the east by Broughton, on the south by Kilbucho, and on the west by Biggar. It extends about four miles in length from north to south, having a general breadth of one mile and a half, with hilly surface, but green and fertile, and well cultivated. Acreage, 3,426; population, 1871, 325

STOBO is a generally well cultivated and planted parish in the western part of the county, lying for the most part on the left bank of the Tweed, and extending about six miles in length by four in breadth. The greater part of the parish is hilly and of a pastoral character; but adjacent to the Tweed and the Lyne the land is well cultivated, and some of it finely planted—the latter character of improvement especially in the grounds surrounding Stobo Castle, a modern and beautiful edifice, situated a short distance from the parish church, within view of the Tweed. Within the parish are extensive slate quarries, which, however, have not been wrought for some years. Acreage, 10,302; population, in 1871, 459

TWEEDSMUIR, about the middle of the 17th century, formed part of the parish of Drummelzier, when it was erected into a separate parish. It lies in the south-western corner of the county, with Lanarkshire on its western border. There are several ancient and rude strongholds in the parish, some of them dignified by the name of "Castles," but having few features of the fortress character. Within the bounds of the parish the river Tweed is augmented by the streams of the Fruid and Talla. Acreage, 23,469; population, 1871, 190

CARRIER.
To EDINBURGH, James Clark, Thursday

PERTHSHIRE.

THIS is one of the most extensive counties in Scotland, lying nearly in the centre of the kingdom, whose great northern and southern divisions it may be said in some measure to connect. It is bounded on the east by the county of Forfar; on the south-east by the counties of Kinross and Fife—from the latter county it is separated for a considerable distance by the Frith of Tay; further on the south its boundaries are Stirlingshire and the small county of Clackmannan, which latter it embraces on both sides; on the south-west Dumbarton touches it for a short distance; on the west it is bounded by Argyleshire; and on the north-west and north by Inverness-shire. The figure of the county is very irregular, being intruded upon by other counties in some quarters, and having many indentations and projections in other parts; but for these circumstances, its form would be nearly that of a perfect circle. From the Frith of Forth at Culross, on the extreme south, to the Forest of Athol, at the source of the Tilt, on the north, it measures sixty-eight miles; and from Meigle on the east, to Argyleshire on the west, about seventy-seven miles. The contents of the area of this county have been variously estimated; we find one authority computing its superficies at two thousand five hundred and eighty-eight square miles of land, and fifty of lakes; another (perhaps the most correct), at two thousand eight hundred and thirty square miles of land, and thirty-three of water. About twenty years ago the number of acres cultivated did not exceed six hundred thousand.

EARLY HISTORY.—The monuments of antiquity which exist in Perthshire are sufficiently numerous to afford a field of curious investigation. Lying northward of the Roman wall, this shire was the theatre of the last struggle for independence which the inhabitants of the low country of Scotland made against the arms of their skilful and then invincible oppressors; the final and most distinguished battle fought by the Britons was that against Agricola, under a leader to whom the Romans have given the name of Galcacus. One of the roads formed by the invaders, passing along the district of Strathearn towards Perth, may still be traced, and also from Perth, along Strathmore, to the extremity of the county; the remains of several encampments, likewise, are at this day observable, particularly one at Ardoch, in the parish of Muthill, the largest and most conspicuous in Scotland. This shire also possesses antiquarian remains of a later age and history, in ruined towers and religious structures, the district having once been the residence of a number of powerful chiefs, and of a large body of churchmen. Before the reformation and during the domination of episcopacy, Perthshire formed the ample diocese of a bishop whose seat was at Dunkeld, as well as another bishopric at Dumblane.

SOIL, SURFACE, AND CLIMATE.—Perthshire may be considered the Yorkshire of Scotland; like that immense county it is subdivided into districts, which, previous to the jurisdictions established in 1748, were stewartries under the power of different great landed proprietors; the names of these various districts (or feudalities) are Monteith, Gowrie, Perth Proper, Strathearn, Stormont, Breadalbane, Rannoch, Balquhidder and Athol. Little attention, however, is now paid to these divisions, and the county is arranged more naturally under the two extensive denominations of Highland and Lowland, the range of Grampians forming the line of demarkation. Eighteen parishes belong to the Highland, portion while that of the Lowland comprises fifty eight. The soil of Perthshire comprehends all the varieties known in Scotland—the carse and loamy being prevalent on the banks of the rivers, and the sandy and tillable classes on the sides of the hills; in many places are extensive mosses; particularly in Monteith district. Within the last century there has been a great deal of planting in Perthshire, greatly to the amelioration of the climate and the advantage of the agriculturalist. His Grace the late Duke of Athol acted a most distinguished part in the rearing of plantations; it appears from returns published in 1839, that he planted 15,473 English acres, the number of plants amounted to the enormous number of 27,231,600, of these plantations, the principal portion to the amount of about 8,600 acres, are of larch, about 1,000 of oak, the remainder are of Scotch fir, spruce fir, a few acres of birch, &c. The same patriotic nobleman exerted himself most beneficially in the improvement of the roads of the county, which have been brought into excellent condition. During the last eighty years a prodigious and most gratifying change has been effected in the agriculture of Perthshire, the low parts of which now vie in rural cultivation, wealth, and beauty with any district in Scotland; the upper portion of the county is still devoted to the pasturage of sheep and cattle, which are mostly driven southward for sale and consumption. The mountains of greatest altitude above the level of the sea in Perthshire are Ben Lawers, 4,015; Ben More, 3,903; Ben Gloa, 3,724; Schiallion, 3,561; Ben Derig, 3,550; Ben Ardlanach, 3,500; Ben Ledi, 3,009; Ben Venue, 3,000; Ben Chonzi, 2,922; Farragon, 2,584; Ben Achally, 1,800; Birnam Hill (mentioned in Shakespear's play of "Macbeth"), 1,580; Turleum, 1,400; Bloir, 1,300; King's Seat, 1,196; Lochtown Hill, 1,172, Kimpurnie, 1,151; Beingloe, 1,040; Dunsinane (whereon was a stronghold of Macbeth, twelve miles from Birnam Hill), 1,024; Kinnoul, 700; and Barry, 688.

PRODUCE AND MANUFACTURES.—The subject of the mineralogy of Perthshire affords sufficient materials to excite and to reward the curiosity and research of the scientific student of the works of nature; but in a commercial or economical point of view its minerals are of no great importance. At Culross, upon the Forth, coal has been wrought for ages; but from its situation, it is of little advantage to this county. Limestone rocks are found in a variety of localities, both in the high and low country; but the use of lime is greatly impeded from the want of proper fuel for burning it—peat, which is the fuel of all the inland districts, being a weak and ineffectual agent in the process of calcination. Marble of a superior quality is worked near Glentilt; beds of fire-clay have been discovered near Culross, and in that neighbourhood, on the Devon, there is abundance of ironstone. About Callander that species of rock called breccia, or, more familiarly, "plum pudding stone," is not uncommon; and here also, as in other parts, are various kinds of slate. A chain of sandstone runs from Gartree to the vicinity of Crieff; upon the Tay is one of the most celebrated stone quarries in this country; the principal stone of which the Grampians consist is granite. Perthshire abounds with game of nearly every description, though the large species is now considerably diminished in numbers; the red deer, or stag, may be said to inhabit the forests and mountain glades in the most perfect state of nature and wildness; it is cautious in the extreme, and singularly jealous of the human form, eluding with wonderful effect the wiles of the sportsman. A variety of other game are also inhabitants of these wilds; among the rest, the roe, a much more familiar animal than the stag—appearing, even in the summer, in the woodlands and plantations of the valleys, down to the habitable places. In regard to its natural features, Perth is esteemed a county of first-rate interest. From its inland situation, Perthshire of course does not comprise any combination of marine and mountain scenery, which form the great attraction of the West Highlands; yet, as it abounds in inland lakes, and possesses rising grounds of as grand a character as that district, it is in no respect inferior as the object of "a tour in search of the picturesque and beautiful," while its charming plains may be said to form an additional attraction. The principal pursuits of industry in the towns and villages of Perthshire is the weaving of linen goods, chiefly of coarse fabrics; in connection with this branch of manufacture, flax spinning mills and a considerable number of bleach fields are established. The manufactures of the county are not, however, wholly confined to that of linen; ginghams and pullicates are produced at Perth, and cotton spinning works are in constant operation at Stanley (in Auchtergaven) and Doune; the woollen manufacture is carried on to a limited extent in two or three places in the shire; and considerable distilleries and breweries are found in several towns and villages. It may be remarked that the whole of this large and populous county exhibits in almost every portion manifestations of being in a thriving and prosperous condition, and affords a strong example of what has been effected during the last century, and a proof, in the civilization of the country, of the exchange of a life of almost savage strife, ignorance, and poverty for one of intelligence, peace, and all the comforts to be procured by industry.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—Like all elevated countries, Perthshire abounds with extensive lakes and rivers, which occupy valleys lying between lofty mountains. The chief running waters are the Tay, the Earn, the Garray, the Bran, the Almond, the Teath, the Allan, the Dochart, the Tummell, the Bruar, the Ericht, the Ardle, the Shee, and the Isla—besides innumerable third and fourth-rate rivers and streamlets of all sizes. The Forth, from rising in Stirlingshire, is not considered a Perthshire river, though it flows along a large portion of its south-west quarter. The chief lakes of the county are Loch Katrine, Loch Achray, Loch Ard, Loch Voil, Loch Lubnaig, Loch Dochart, and Loch Earn. Those are in the south-west part of the shire; Loch Tay in the centre of the mountainous district, and Loch Rannoch, Loch Ericht, and Loch Lydoch (the two latter in part only) in the north-west quarter. In the lower divisions there are some smaller and less important lakes. The most remarkable mineral waters as yet discovered in this county are those of Pitcaithly, near the Bridge of Earn, which have been long famed for their efficacy in curing scrofula and complaints of the stomach. The county is intersected by the Caledonian, the North British, and the Highland railways, and from these main lines run many important branches.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &C.—Perthshire comprehends seventy-two entire parishes and twelve parts of parishes. The county is divided into ten districts, each under the jurisdiction of a justice of peace court and a body of deputy-lieutenants; it is further divided into two sheriff-substituteries—the seat of the one being Perth, the other Dunblane. The shire contains only two royal burghs, Perth and Culross: the former returns one member to Parliament, and the latter is a contributory burgh, joining with Stirling, Queensferry, Inverkeithing, and Dunfermline, in sending another. The shire, in common with other Scottish counties, likewise has one representative in the Senate. The present member for the shire (1877) is Sir W. Stirling-Maxwell, Bart. The county contains an acreage of 1,614,806. The population in 1871 was returned at 127,768—namely, 60,663 males and 67,105 females; and in 1861 it numbered 133,500; the parliamentary constituency is 5,671.

ABERFELDY,

WITH THE PARISHES OF WEEM AND DULL.

ABERFELDY is a thriving and neat village, partly in the parish of Dull, and partly in that of Logierait, 18 miles N.W. from Dunkeld, 9 W. from Logierait, and six N.E. from Kenmore; situated on the south bank of the beautiful river Tay, on the great Highland road, which crosses the river by a bridge, elegant and substantial, of three arches, constructed by the celebrated General Wade. This part of the county is justly recognised as the centre of the most beautiful scenes on the Tay, comprising mountain, dale, and wood, and the locality is likewise attractive from its proximity to the romantic falls of Moness. The village contains several establishments of business importance—these include branches of the Bank of Scotland, Union Bank of Scotland, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland, a woollen manufactory, &c. The village is well lighted with gas, and supplied with water. A sheriff's small debt court is held in the Breadalbane Academy, on the fourth Saturday of April, August and December, when claims are settled to any amount not exceeding £12. The Ballinluig and Aberfeldy branch of the Highland Railway terminates here. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in January (old style), on the Tuesday before Kenmore March fair; on the first Tuesday in April (old style), for horses and cattle; first Tuesday in May, for cattle and sheep; on the Saturday next before Amulree fair; on the first Friday in August (old style), and on the last Thursday in October (old style), for cattle and sheep. Population in 1871, 1,150.

WEEM is an extensive Highland parish in the district of Breadalbane. It is so mixed up with and intersected by neighbouring parishes that no accurate idea can be given of its extent and boundaries. The surface is mountainous and rugged; it is watered by the rivers Tay, Lyon, Lochy, and Dochart. The church of Weem is 74 miles N.N.W. from Edinburgh, 34 N.W. from Perth, and 9 W. from Logierait. There is an Episcopal church (St. David's) built in the Norman style of architecture, at a cost of £2,000. It was the gift of Sir Robert Menzies, Baronet, and friends. Near the church is Castle Menzies, the seat of Sir Robert Menzies, Bart. It is a handsome building, with lofty turrets, surrounded by fine plantations, pleasure grounds and orchards—a spot presenting a refreshing contrast to many other parts of the district. Near the castle is the Weem Hotel, an establishment admirably adapted for the reception of families and other visitors. It is sheltered from the north winds, and is placed in the midst of the most delightful and interesting scenery with which this locality richly abounds. Amongst the objects of interest in the immediate vicinity are Taymouth Castle, ruins of Garth Castle, Maggermie Castle, Birks of Aberfeldy, Falls of Moness, Achorn, and Keltney. The parish possesses an acreage of 41,887, and by the returns for 1871 a population of 520.

DULL is also a large parish, assimilating in its localities with Weem, so that a just estimate of its extent cannot be arrived at. It comprehends, however, a general length of thirty miles, by a breadth of about twelve. The river Tummel bounds the district on the north-east, and the Lyon and Tay on the south; which rivers abound with excellent salmon, and the lakes (of which there are fifteen, of large and small dimensions), abound with fine trout, pike and eels. The military road from Stirling to Inverness passes through the entire length of the parish. The church stands at APPIN, about two miles and a half west from Weem. The lofty mountain Schiehallion, which rises upwards of three thousand five hundred feet, is seen on the northern border, with its brow shrouded in mist. The village of Dull is situated two miles west from Castle Menzies, and was at one time the seat of a Roman catholic college, of which no traces now remain. An Established church is in the village. The population of the parish in 1871 numbered 2,681; and the acreage was 63,417.

ABERNETHY AND ABERARGIE,

WITH THE PARISH OF DRON.

ABERNETHY is a parish lying partly in the county of Fife and partly in Perthshire. The village, said to have been the capital of the Pictish kingdom in Scotland, is scattered over a considerable space of ground, and eight miles S.E. from Perth, and fourteen N.W. from Cupar, in Fife, about half a mile south of the river Earn, near to its junction with the Tay. It is seated to the south of a spacious and rich agricultural dale, bounded by lofty hills, which are chiefly planted with timber. Some of the houses are tolerably well-built, but the only structure deserving particular notice is a circular tower, the only one of its kind (with the exception of that at Brechin) in Scotland. It stands in an angle of the burial ground of the Established church, and is about seventy-five feet high, and twenty-four feet in diameter at its base. The date of its erection is unknown, but tradition ascribes its origin to the Picts, who are said to have built it in one night, and that the stones of which it is constructed were removed from the distance of twelve miles, by a formed line, one man passing them on to another until the whole work was completed. On the outside of the tower is yet to be seen the jougs (a padlocked collar and chain), a memorial of the discipline to which offenders were subjected in bygone days. Abernethy is a burgh of barony, governed by two bailies, fifteen councillors, a treasurer, and a town clerk. The inhabitants are for the most part employed in salmon fishing and weaving. The parish of Abernethy is bounded by the river Earn on the north, on the east by Newburgh and Abdie, and on the south by Auchtermuchty and Strathmiglo; it is between five and six miles both in breadth and length, comprising 9,544 acres, and besides the village of its name already described, contains the small one of Aberargie, situated about a mile to the west. A hill, situated a little to the north of Binns Farm, commands one of the finest views in Scotland, comprising Strathmore, Strathearn, the Grampians, Ochils, Sidlaws, Pentland Hills, Frith of Forth, Loch Leven Castle, Glen Farg, &c. In 1871 this parish had a population of 1,744, and the village 958 A fair is held on the fourth Wednesday in May.

DRON, a parish in the south-western extremity of Perthshire, extending into the beautiful district of Strathearn, is divided from Abernethy, on the east, by the rivulet Farg. Although in some parts the surface is broken and irregular, in the lower parts the land is flat and fertile, being a portion of the rich carse of the Earn. The church, a handsome Gothic edifice, is a fine object on the rising ground to the left, on approaching the Bridge of Earn from the south. This parish, which embraces an area of 4,188 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 343.

ON THE EDINBURGH, PERTH AND DUNDEE LINE.

Station, ABERNETHY—J. R. Mackie, station master

CARRIER.

To PERTH, William Bett, Tuesday & Friday

ALYTH, GLENISLA, AND RUTHVEN.

ALYTH is a parish, and contains the thriving town of its name; the latter is 62 miles N. from Edinburgh, 20 N. from Perth, 17 N.W. from Dundee, 12 W. from Forfar, 5 from Blairgowrie, and 4 from Meigle, pleasantly situated at the base of a range of hills on the small river Alyth. The parish is mostly in the county of Perth, and extends into that of Forfar, and is divided into two considerable districts by the hills of Alyth, Loyal, Barry, and part of Mount Blair—a conspicuous point of land rising about twelve hundred feet above the level of the sea. The southern district lying in the the Strath is about four miles long and three broad. This, as well as the tract of land towards the hills, is fertile and verdant, and watered by the river Isla and several small streams. The town has considerably improved since the completion of the railway in 1861. There are two mills employed in the manufacture of linen, which is carried on here to a considerable extent, and finds employment for a large number of the inhabitants. The new mill, erected by David Smith & Sons in 1873, is most complete, and, in addition to the ordinary work, dyeing, bleaching, and calendering is carried on. There is also a mill for the manufacture of woollens. Alyth was erected into a burgh of barony by James III., and a court was held on the first Tuesday in every month; but, owing to the increase of the town it has been found necessary to adopt the Lindsay Police Act of 1862, and the town is now governed by a chief magistrate, who is an ex-officio justice of peace for the county, and eight commissioners. The town is plentifully supplied with good water, and the paving of the streets, &c. is being rapidly executed. Being within an easy distance from Dundee, there are a number of visitors from that quarter during the summer months. The places of worship consist of a Parish church, an imposing edifice, with a lofty spire; a Free church and a chapel, each for United Presbyterians and Episcopalians. The markets are held on the fourth Monday in January, February, March, April, and December; the third Tuesday in May, hiring, cattle, and sheep; the second Tuesday in June (old style); the first Tuesday in August, and first Tuesday and Wednesday after the 11th of November. The entire parish contains an acreage of 23,296. The population in 1871 numbered 8,352, of which 2,134 were returned for the town.

GLENISLA is a parish in the county of Forfar, lying to the west of Lentrathen, and extending about twenty-one miles in length. In general it is between six and seven miles in breadth. A great part of it is the vale through which flows the river Isla. The kirktown of Glenisla stands on the left bank of the river. A market is held here on the Thursday before the last Wednesday in September. The acreage is 41,242, and the population in 1871, 925.

RUTHVEN is a parish situated on the north side of the vale of Strathmore, county of Forfar. It is about two and a half miles in length by about two in breadth. The river Isla enters Perthshire from this parish. Colonel Thomas Wedderburn Ogilvy, of Ruthven House, is the sole heritor. Acreage, 2,049; population, about 250.

POST OFFICE, Cross, William Mollison, Post Master.—Letters from Edingburgh, Glasgow, and the South arrive at seven and twenty-five minutes past ten morning; and are despatched at a quarter-past twelve noon and a quarter before six evening. Letters from Aberdeen and the North arrive at seven evening; and are despatched at ten night.

Money Order and Telegraph Office and Savings Bank.

 Letters for Glenisla, Woodend, and Folda should be addressed "by ALYTH."

Post Office, RUTHVEN, Betsy Coupar, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Meigle) at half-past twelve noon; and are despatched at half-past two afternoon.

AUCHTERARDER,

ABERUTHVEN, BLACKFORD, TRINITY GASK, FINDO GASK, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AUCHTERARDER is a parish and seat of a presbytery—the town, a considerable one, and of some consequence in manufactures, is twenty miles from Stirling, and fourteen from Perth; situated on the high road between the latter city and Doune, on the south side of the river Earn (whose stream is famed for trout and salmon), and it is a station on the Scottish Central Section of the Caledonian Railway. The village, which at one period enjoyed the distinction of being a royal burgh, consists of one large street, which extends nearly a mile in length, and is famous as the place where originated the disruption in the Church of Scotland, with the late Rev. Robert Young. The majority of the inhabitants are employed in weaving. There are two dye works in the parish. A new combination poorhouse has been erected near Auchterarder, for the accommodation of this and fifteen adjoining parishes. The places of worship are an Established, a Free, and two United Presbyterian churches. The town also contains several good schools. The ruins of Kincardine Castle, the ancient seat of the Montrose family, are in the neighbourhood. The road to the castle from Auchterarder passes between the bellows and the forge of an ingenious blacksmith named Hally. The market is held on Saturday. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in February, the last Wednesday in March, the first Thursday after the first Tuesday in May, the Friday before the Falkirk Michaelmas tryst, and the largest on the 6th of December. Population of the parish in 1871, 3,795, of the town, 2,599.

ABERUTHVEN is a small village in the parish of and situated two miles north from Auchterarder, on the road to Perth. The village contains a Free church, and the ruins of an old church, part of which has been converted into a vault for the family of James Duncan, Esq. of Damside, and the Graeme family, of Inchbrakie; and a short distance hence is a mausoleum belonging to the noble family of Montrose. Population, 478.

BLACKFORD is a parish and village, the latter being situated four miles west of Auchterarder, on the road from Doune to Perth, at the extremity of the Ochil Hills. The parish is watered by the Allan, from the north of which river the ground rises and forms a group of sandy hills, with a number of vast hollows, some of them round, and others extending in length, forming little valleys, through which for the most part run small brooks. The village is of considerable size and importance, containing several extensive tanneries and breweries, one of the latter having been in existence since 1830. The other trades are building, shoe manufacturing, and others usually found in villages. There is a branch of the Bank of Scotland, an Established and a Free church, and several good schools. The Scottish Central Section of the Caledonian line passes through the village, and has a station here. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,883, and of the village, 867.

FINDO GASK is a parish about seven miles north-east of Auchterarder. It contains an Established church, and a public school. Population in 1871, 369.

TRINITY GASK is a parish about five miles north of Auchterarder. The parish contains an Established church, an United Presbyterian church, and a public school. Adjoining Orchard Farm are the ruins of Gasken Hall, the scene of Wallace's interview with Fawdon's Ghost. Population in 1871, 415.

BLAIR ATHOLE,

WITH THE BRIDGE OF TILT AND STRUAN.

BLAIR ATHOLE is a small village and parish, included in the district of Athol or Athole. What is now designated the parish of Blair Athole formerly consisted of four parishes, viz. Blair, Lude, Kilmaveonaig and Strowan. The word Athole signifies pleasant land, and Blair of Athole, the name of the principal valley, means the field or vale of Athole. The district of Athole is forty-five miles in length, and thirty in breadth, and the parish is twenty four miles from north-east to south-west, and twenty from north to south. It lies on the north-west Highlands of Perthshire, bounded on the south by Fortingal Foss and Moulin, and on the north by Inverness and Aberdeenshire, and on the east by Kirkmichael and Moulin, and on the west by Rannoch, and contains a large tract of Highland territory, the mountains of which are almost covered with large and beautiful woods, interspersed with fertile vales, which are in a high state of cultivation. The valley of the Garry, from the pass of Killiecrankie to the point of Strowan may be considered the nucleus of the parish. The principal lakes and rivers are Loch Garry and Loch Tummel, and the Tummel, Tilt and Garry all abounding with a variety of fish. The village is situated on the north side of the Garry, twenty miles north-west from Dunkeld, on the Inverness road, where there is a station on the Highland Railway. Within a short distance of the village is the noble old Castle of Blair, the family residence of the Duke of Athole. The castle has been, within a few last few years, restored to its original form, according to a design by Mr. Bryce, of Edinburgh, and the addition of towers and turrets adds much to its appearance. The woods in the neighbourhood are very fine, some of the larches being the oldest in Scotland. Three miles to the west of the village are the Falls of Bruar, consisting of a succession of cascades in a ravine of romantic beauty. The banks are covered with woods, planted by a late Duke of Athole, in answer to Burns's well-known "Petition of Bruar Water." Neat gas works have been erected, which at present supply the castle and hotel. A branch of the Union Bank of Scotland is in operation; and in the village is also an excellent hotel. The acreage of the parish is 181,114; and the population in 1871 was returned as 1,788, of which Blair Athole and Bridge of Tilt numbered 387.

In the parish of Athole is the beautiful little village of BRIDGE OF TILT, separated only from Blair Athole by the water of Tilt, which is crossed by a neat bridge, that gives the prefix to the name of the place. It consists of a few neat cottages, the Free church, and also the old Episcopal chapel of Kilmaveonaig; and its pretty rural aspect is embellished by the beautiful residence and grounds of J. P. M'Inroy, Esq. of Lude. Between the villages of Blair and Bridge of Tilt are situated the parish church, a plain but commodious structure, and the parochial school buildings, which have been much improved. CALVINE is a hamlet in the parish. The scenery around is very charming, and includes Glen Tilt, the Falls of Fender, &c., all combining to interest the tourist. The principal heritor of the parish is the Duke of Athole.

STRUAN, or STROWAN, is a small village in the parish of Blair Athole, five miles north from the latter place, at which there is one of the parish churches. In the churchyard is a remarkable stone with a Runic inscription, very interesting to antiquarians.

BLAIRGOWRIE,

RATTRAY AND NEW RATTRAY, CLUNIE, BENDOCHY, LETHENDY AND KINLOCH.

BLAIRGOWRIE is a parish containing the thriving town of its name—the latter 12 miles E. from Dunkeld, 5 W. from Alyth, and the same distance N. from Coupar-Angus; beautifully situated on the southern slope of the range of hills which bound the valley of Strathmore on the north, and at the mouth of the pass through which the great north road to Fort George (by the Spittal of Glenshee and the Castle town of Braemar) runs. The river Ericht passes close to the town, and propels the machinery of several flax-spinning mills on a large scale on both sides of the river; and there is also a linen manufactory. A branch of the Caledonian Railway from Coupar-Angus was opened in 1855, and by its means there is communication with most parts of the United Kingdom. Blairgowrie was created a burgh of barony in the year 1634, by a charter from Charles I. The affairs of the town are now governed by a baron bailie and eleven councillors, and by a board of police commissioners. A sheriff small debt court is held for the disposal of cases not exceeding £12 on the second Saturday in January, April, July and October. The magistrates hold a monthly court for settling claims under £2; and a police court sits when necessary. There are four branch banking establishments, two savings banks, and clubs for the votaries of angling, bowling, curling, &c. The places of worship are an Established church, a Chapel of Ease, two Free churches, and chapels for Episcopalians, Independents, and Roman Catholics. Blairgowrie parish is of an irregular form, about eleven miles in length, and three in breadth. It is divided into two districts by the Grampians, which rise immediately north of the town; the lower district is highly cultivated and fertile, while the upper is comparatively barren and moorish, with the exception of the banks of the river, which are good alluvial soil. The scenery in the neighbourhood of the town is bery beautiful; and in the adjoining parish, about Craighall (the seat of Colonel James Clerk Rattray, C. B.), it is of the most romantic character, and is scarcely surpassed in any part of Scotland; the proprietor kindly permits strangers visiting the place to walk through the entire grounds. To the lovers of angling no locality could be more suitable for enjoying this amusement, there being not only excellent trout and salmon fishing in the Ericht and the Tay, the Isla and the burns of Lunan and Lornty (which are all within a moderate distance of the town), but likewise capital perch and pike fishing in the several lochs in the neighbourhood. On account of the inviting attractions around, the salubrity of the air, and the numerous lovely walks in the environs, the town is much frequented in summer by families from more crowded places, who are happy to exchange the confined atmosphere which they usually inhale for the invigorating breezes of the country. Amongst the antiquities of the vicinity, the remains the Castle of Glascune must be noticed; they present a strikingly picturesque ruin, situated on the precipitous bank of a narrow wooded glen, about two miles from the town. Fairs are held at Blairgowrie on the third Wedesday in March, on the 26th of May (if it falls on Wednesday, it not on the first Wednesday after), the 23rd of July, the first Wednesday of November, the 22nd of November (or the first Tuesday after), and the Wednesday before Falkirk tryst; a market for cattle and grain is also held every fortnight on Tuesday, which is well attended. The annual Martinmas market, for hiring and cattle, is held on the 23rd of November, except Saturday, when the 23rd falls on a Saturday, Sunday or Monday. Population of the parish in 1871, 5,109; acreage, 15,303.

RATTRAY is a parish adjoining Blairgowrie, comprising the villages of OLD and NEW RATTRAY. The former pleasant, but irregular in its buildings, is situated about three-quarters of a mile east from Blairgowrie. New Rattray is of modern erection, and is connected with Blairgowrie by a bridge of four arches crossing the Ericht. The parish extends four miles in length by two in breadth. The surface is much diversified, the land on the banks of the river being arable and fertile, while the higher grounds are only suitable for pasture. On the banks of the river there are flax spinning mills, which afford employment to a large number of the inhabitants. To the south-east, on a rising ground called the Castle hill, remain the vestiges of the ancient Castle of Rattray; and about two miles north of the village stands Craig Hall, on a rock that rises one hundred feet perpendicularly. The places of worship are a handsome church built in 1820, a Free church, and one for United Presbyterians. Fairs are held on the first Friday in April and August. Population of the parish in 1871, 2,610; acreage, 5,382.

CLUNIE parish lies about five miles west from Blairgowrie; it includes part of the lower range of the Grampians, which are barren, and covered with heather. The scenery, however, on the whole is romantic and pleasing, presenting abundance of wood and water. The loch of Clunie is one of the most beautiful small sheets of water in the country; within it is a small island, on which stands an ancient tower, the property of the Airlie family, which is supposed to have been the birth-place of the "Admirable Crichton," whose father, Sir Robert Crichton, Lord Advocate of Scotland, was then proprietor of the barony of Clunie. The tower is still in good repair, and partly furnished, though rarely occupied, but it is open to strangers desirous of visiting it. On the northern side of the lake lies the charming property of Forneth, belonging to the Spied family. This parish, which embraces an area of 11,3[illegible]4 acres, in 1871, contained a population of 603.

BENDOCHY is a parish in Strathmore, a few miles east of Coupar-Angus, bounded on the east by the river Isla, and is divided in two parts by the river Ericht. It is twelve miles in length, and from six to eight in breadth. Population of the parish in 1871, 675; acreage, 9,368. There are seven small lakes in the parish.

LETHENDY, a small parish bounded by Caputh on the south, Clunie on the west, and Blairgowrie on the east, is about three miles in length, by one in breadth. The land is arable.

KINLOCH is a parish, bounded by Clunie on the south, Blairgowrie on the east, and Bendochy on the north, extending about seven miles in length, by an average breadth of one and a half. There are three lakes in the southern division, namely, Fenzies Loch, Rae Loch, and Drummelie Loch. The parish church is situated on the public road, on the south-east verge of the district. Lethendy and Kinloch parishes embrace 7,060 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 439.

CALLANDER,

ABERFOYLE, BALQUHIDDER, BRIDGE OF TURK, LOCHEARNHEAD, PORT OF MENTEITH, LUSKIE, STRATHYRE, GARTMORE, TROSSACHS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CALLANDER is a modern and neat village, and parish, and a burgh by the adoption of the Police (Scotland) Act 1862; 52 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 40 S.W. from Perth, 45 N. from Glasgow, 16 N.W. from Stirling, 8 N.W. from Doune, and 5 N. from Thornhill; situated in a beautiful valley on both sides of the Teith, which river is here crossed by a bridge of three arches; and the houses are disposed in regular plan, and covered with blue slates. The places of worship are an Established and a Free church, both of which are handsome modern buildings, with good schools in connection; and there is also an Episcopal chapel. The town possesses a station on the Dunblane, Doune and Callander Railway, and the Callander and Oban Railway—an extension of the above line is now open as far as Tyndrum, but is expected shortly to be open as far as Dalmally. The facility of railway communication has been the means of bringing thousands of visitors and tourists during the summer to enjoy the beautiful scenery of Callander and neighbourhood; and many first-class villas and cottages have been erected and fitted up for their accommodation; the two first-class hotels—the Dreadnought and the M'Gregor's—also afford excellent accommodation to a large number. The scenery around Callander is uncommonly beautiful; immediately above the village is a peculiarly lovely spot, formed by the junction of two little rivers, issuing respectively from Loch Lubnaig and Loch Vennacher, which when united form the Teith. Callander may be reckoned the threshold of the Highlands in this quarter. A mile west of the village is the pass of Leny, which affords access to a delightful range of mountain prospect; the bridge of Bracklyn is another fine point in the scenery directly surrounding Callander; and the ride to Loch Katrine and the Trossachs (classic scenes), about ten miles from the village, is extremely fine. The parish extends from the banks of the Teith to the Grampians; and is about sixteen miles in length by a breadth of ten. The low grounds are arable and fertile, but the upper country is wild and heathy. Callander has four annual fairs, namely, the 21st of March, first Tuesday in May (old style), the third Tuesday in July, and first Thursday in December (old style). The parish of Callander embraces an area of 51,186 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 1870; of this number the village contained 1,271.

ABERFOYLE, a parish (and the name of a celebrated pass or long valley between the Highlands and Lowlands), is remarkable for its picturesque scenery, its fine lakes and numerous streams, and the marked direction taken by the Grampians through the lower part of it, as well as for producing a great quantity of rare plants, suited to reward the researches of the botanist. The village, or "clachan" of Aberfoyle is the scene of some fictions in the novel of "Rob Roy." At the head of the valley or pass lies Loch Ard, a bright and placid basin, embedded in surrounding woods over which rises the gracefully towering form of Ben Lomond, one of whose summit platforms ascends upwards of 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. The best view of this noble eminence is obtained from a wooded promontory which juts out into the water (scarcely leaving room for the road that passes on to the westward), and which, it is said, was the spot on which the skirmish occurred, described in the above novel, where Helen Macgregor makes her first appearance. Loch Ard and Loch Chon, near Aberfoyle, are famous for their fishing, being considered the earliest fly fishing lochs in Scotland, fish taking readily early in March. Mr. Baird's hotel, the "Bailie Nicol Jarvie," affords excellent accommodation to tourists and visitors; there is also a good supply of boats in connection with the hotel for those piscatorially inclined. Fairs are held within the parish on the first Friday in August, and the third Thursday in October. The parish of Aberfoyle contains an area of 26,810 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 452.

BALQUHIDDER is a highland parish, lying in the western extremity of the county, among the Grampians. The village is situated at the east end of Loch Voil at the distance of thirteen miles from Callander, and is remarkable as the last residence of the famous Rob Roy, whose grave is pointed out in the churchyard. It was visited by her Majesty and the Princesses Louise and Beatrice in 1869. The parish is altogether mountainous and pastoral, and from the number of acclivities forming its sides has obtained the popular appellation of the "Braes of Balquhidder," by which name it is celebrated in Scottish song and legend. It comprises several lofty mountains, among which Ben More rises in conspicuous superiority, and likewise possesses many beautiful lakes, including Loch Doune, Loch Voil, part of Loch Lubnaig, and part of Loch Earn, with several of minor celebrity. Balquhidder has an area of 54,675 acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 743 persons.

LOCHEARNHEAD is a beautiful little village in the parish of Balquhidder, situated at the head of Loch Earn, from which it derives its name. This village has been twice visited by the Queen; the first time with the late Prince Consort in 1841, and again in September, 1869, in company with the Princesses Louise and Beatrice, who stayed at the hotel while on a visit to Sir Malcolm and Lady Helen M'Gregor, the chief of the M'Gregor's, whose property, EDINCHIP, is within half a mile of the village. The Callander and Oban Railway possesses a station here, which passes high above the village, on the hillside looking down on one of the most magnificent views that can be imagined. The station is two miles distant from the hotel, owing to the steep incline required to get over the hill into Glen Dochart. The loch is an elongated sheet of water eight miles in length, one in breadth, and said to be one hundred fathoms deep; it is at the foot of Glen Ogle, a wild pass or outlet from the Breadalbane country, and the North-Western Highlands. The beautiful situation and quiet character of the place, with the many objects of interest, and the fine scenery, attract many visitors, tourists, and private families during the summer months. The views from the oriel window of Mr. Dayton's magnificent hotel, command the fine scenery of the lake, the upper part of Strathearr, and the mountains, one of the latter (Benvoirlich) rises from the shore to a height of 3,300 feet. In the village is a Free church and two good schools. Excellent fishing may be had on the loch, free to parties staying in the hotel, and omnibuses meet all trains.

PORT OF MENTEITH (or Monteith) is a parish in the ancient district of Monteith, fifteen miles from Stirling. The chief object of attraction in the parish is the Loch or Lake of Menteith, a beautiful sheet of water near the centre of the district, adjoining the church and manse. It is about five miles in circumference, and is adorned by the small island of INCHMAHOLM, where stand the fine remains of a priory or monastery founded in 1238. The ruins of the church and cloisters are very extensive, and exhibit many fine specimens of fine old architecture of a massive nature. The archway entrance is very elegant. The dormitory and vaults have been for many ages the place of sepulture of many noble and ancient families. The ruins of these interesting buildings are sequestered in overhanging woods of considerable age and growth; some of the trees are said to be upwards of three centuries old. In this vicinity, on a gentle eminence, are seen the remains of what is still known as Queen Mary's Bower, where, after the disastrous battle of Pinkie, the young princess found a safe asylum till her departure for France. The boxwood bower, with its large hawthorn in the centre, where the youthful princess passed some of her happiest days, is still an object of interest to all who visit the island. In a smaller islet, a small distance from Inchmaholm, stand the ruins of the principal residence of the Earls of Menteith. The Menteith Hotel adjoins the loch, and is capable of affording excellent accommodation to visitors who wish to enjoy the beautiful scenery of the district. The village of GARTMORE and the small hamlets of RUSKIE and HAMMERSMITH are in this parish. Gartmore possesses a library, built and presented to his birth-place by Mr. John M'Donald, a Glasgow merchant, the charge for membership being merely nominal —one shilling per annum. He also gives the rent of a house adjoining to assist in meeting current expenses.

STRATHYRE is a small village in the parish of Balquhidder, eight miles from Callander, and a station on the Callander and Oban Railway.

TROSSACHS (classic scenes) is a mountainous district in the west portion of the parish of Callander, and comprises the most magnificent lake and mountain scenery in Scotland. The church (a quoad sacra) and manse are about a mile and a half from Loch Katrine and eight miles from Callander. A short distance from the church is the Trossach's Hotel, an establishment well known to visitors and tourists, who come from all parts of the kingdom to enjoy the splendid scenery in the neighbourhood of the Trossachs, Loch Katrine, Loch Achray, Loch Vennacher, &c.

The BRIDGE OF TURK, made famous by the couplet—

And when the Bridge of Turk was won,
The headmost horseman rode alone.

is a small hamlet in this parish, and contains a school, and the ruins of a very large and handsome hotel, which was unfortunately burned down some time ago.

COMRIE, SAINT FILLANS AND MONZIEVAIRD.

COMRIE is a parish and village—the latter, respectable and populous, is 58 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 24 w. from Perth, and 6½ from Crieff; situated in a beautiful and romantic valley at the foot of the Grampians, and on the north bank of the Earn, at the junction of the Lednock. Loch Earn lies at the western extremity of the parish, and from it flows the beautiful Earn along which there is a public road through the valley of Strathearn. In the village the manufacture of woollens is carried on to a limited extent. There are two branch banks and a reading room, the latter well supplied with local and foreign papers, periodicals, &c. The beautiful scenery in the neighbourhood of Comrie and Saint Fillans attracts a considerable number of visitors during the summer. A church of the Establishment, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian church are the places of worship; the first mentioned is a handsome and modern building, with a fine spire. In the neighbourhood are presented some interesting and attractive objects; the most remarkable are vestiges of Roman encampments on the plains of Dalginross, several druidical circles, and a monument of granite, seventy-two feet high, erected in 1815, to the memory of the late Lord Melville. There is also another memorial, formed of the same material, eighty feet high, to the memory of the late Sir David Baird. Five fairs are held in the year, namely, St. Kenach's on the 22nd of March, the first Tuesday in May, the 11th of July, the 8th of November, and the 4th of December. Comrie parish has an area of 60,593 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 1,911; of this number the village had 746.

MONZIEVAIRD parish includes the abrogated parish of STROWAN. Thus united, it is bounded on the north by Comrie and Monzie, by the former also on the west, by Muthill on the south, and by Crieff on the east. The river Earn passes through the district from west to east; and in the neighbourhood of this stream the country is beautiful, well planted and enclosed. There are several small lakes in the parish, among which Monzievaird lake, situated at the bottom of a fine wood, and well stored with pike, perch and eels, is a delightful object to passengers, and a great ornament to the pleasure grounds of Ochtertyre. On the banks of the lake a fine repeating echo is produced. There are some other seats of great beauty and taste, among which Lawers is the most distinguished. It was in this parish that the atrocious act of annihilation was all but carried into effect upon the clan Murray, by the clan Drummond. The latter being the most powerful, collected the men, women and children of the Murray clan in the old parish church and set fire to it, when every soul was burned, save one, who leaped out of the window and was caught in the arms of one of the Drummonds, who being more humane than the rest saved the man's life. There is a church and public school in the parish. Acreage, 26,093. Population in 1871, 744.

SAINT FILLANS is a small hamlet in the parish of Comrie, five and a half miles from that village, pleasantly situated at the foot of Loch Earn, where boats are kept for the accommodation of fishing parties or other visitors, who are attracted hither by the delightful scenery of this district. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment and a Free church; and there is an excellent inn affording every accommodation to gentlemen during the fishing and shooting season. Population returned with the parish.

COUPAR-ANGUS,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BURRELTON, CARGILL, WOODSIDE, WOLF HILL, WASHINGTON AND BALBROGIE.

COUPAR-ANGUS is a neat market town in the parish of its name, 15 miles N.W. from Dundee, 12¾ E. by N. from Perth, and 4¾ from Blairgowrie. It is a station on the Caledonian railway, and pleasantly situated on the Isla, a few miles above its junction with the Tay, on the main roads from Dundee to Blairgowrie and from Perth to Forfar. A branch of the Caledonian railway is now in operation from Coupar to Blairgowrie. A small stream, tributary to the Isla, divides the town into two parts; that portion which lies to the south of this rivulet is all that belongs to the county of Angus (or Forfar). In ancient times this place was the seat of an abbey of Cistercian monks, founded by Malcolm IV. in 1164, and endowed with considerable revenues by that monarch. At the Reformation this edifice, which was of considerable magnitude, was destroyed by a mob from Perth. The remains occupy part of the site of a Roman camp, said to have been formed by the army of Agricola in his seventh expedition. The town is compact and well built, and has the advantage of being lighted with gas, and considerable improvements have been made. The venerable steeple in Queen street is used as a clock tower. The street formerly called Abbey street is now Queen street, to perpetuate the remembrance of Her Majesty's transit through Coupar-Angus in 1849. Considerable quantities of linen fabrics are manufactured here. Three large power loom factories are in full operation, adding considerably to the prosperity of the place, and there are a tannery, several saw mills and farina works in the neighbourhood. The Royal is the principal hotel here. There are three banking establishments, viz., branches repectively of the National Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland, also a savings bank. The town is governed by commissioners of police and police magistrates under the provisions of the Police Act of 1862. A justice court is held occasionally, and a sheriff's court on the third Saturday in January, April, July and October. At both these courts claims for small debts are adjudicated. The municipal affairs of the town are administered by a board of nine police commissioners, of whom the chief commissioner is ex-officio a justice of peace for the county. The parochial board is the local authority for sanitary affairs, and under their auspices the town is now plentifully supplied with good water from the estate of Pitcur, about two miles south from Coupar-Angus, which had hitherto been very unsatisfactory. The old parish church was an ancient building, but was so far decayed as to necessitate its being taken down. A larger and more elaborate edifice, in the Gothic style, has been erected on the site. The church has a large graveyard around it, in which are several tombs and monuments of venerable date; this edifice stands in Forfarshire. There is a Free church and four other places of worship not connected with the Establishment. The parish of Coupar-Angus extends five miles along the east bank of the river Isla, varying from one to two miles in breadth; the surface, arable and meadow land, is well cultivated and enclosed. Though called Coupar-Angus, there is in reality but a small portion of the town or parish in the county of Forfar or Angus. The village of WASHINGTON and the hamlet of BALBROGIE are both situated in the southern part of the parish. There is a market for grain, cattle, &c. every Thursday. Fairs, the third Thursday in March for horses and cattle, the third Monday in May for cattle, sheep and hiring, and for horses, sheep and cattle the third Thursday in July, and for cattle, sheep and hiring the third Monday in November; and a cattle market held on the third Monday in November, December, January, February, March and April. Coupar-Angus parish, which embraces an area of 4,699 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 3,055; at the same date the town numbered 2,149.

BURRELTON and WOODSIDE are villages lying close together in the parish of Cargill, on the road from Coupar-Angus to Perth, distant two miles from the former and eleven from the latter place. There is a station of the Caledonian railway at Woodside, and a Free church. The population of the two villages together in 1871 numbered 550.

CARGILL is a parish situated in the vale of Strathmore, and about three miles from Coupar-Angus. Its extent from east to west is about six miles, and from north to south about four miles, bounded on the south by Collace and Saint Martins, on the west by the river Tay, on the north by Caputh and Coupar-Angus, and on the east by Coupar-Angus and Kettins. The rivers Tay and Isla join in the parish. WOLFHILL is a village in this parish. The church is a plain but substantial edifice erected in 1831. Cargill parish embraces an area of 9,495 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 1,411.

CRIEFF,

WITH THE PARISHES OF MONZIE, FOWLIS WESTER AND MADDERTY, AND THE VILLAGES OF HARRIETFIELD, GILMORTON, BUCHANTY, LOGIEALMOND, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CRIEFF is a parish, market town, and burgh, under the General Police (Scotland) Act, 1862. The town is 22 miles N. from Stirling, 17 W. from Perth, and 6½ E. from Comrie, situated in Upper Strathearn, one of the most delightful districts in Scotland, on the southern declivity of a hill near the Grampians, having the Earn and several streams at the bottom, backed by hills, crags and the Knock of Crieff, all of considerable altitude—the outports of the ancient Grampians and the bulwarks of Scottish independence. Upper Strathearn occupies the mouth of an important pass at the Sma' Glen, where the Romans had a station, and where tradition lays the bones of Ossian, and points to a fragment of his displaced tombstone. It proceeds into the Highlands of Perthshire, having a wild mountainous region on the one side and rich soft vales on the other. Crieff is a thriving and increasing town, deriving no small advantage from the resort in the summer months of invalids and others, who are attracted by the beauty of the scenery and the salubrity of its situation. During the past few years a great improvement has been made by the erection of commodious villas, for the accommodation of the better class of summer visitors. Crieff has for a century been lauded as the Montpelier of Scotland, and its salubrity of air and beauty of scenery go far to entitle it to this appellation. The healthiness of the locality is attested by the returns of the Registrar, which show that the mortality of the parish is lower than in any even of the rural districts of Scotland. As regards railway communication, Crieff is connected with the railway system of the country by the Crieff Junction and by the Methvin and Crieff Railway, being branches of the Caledonian line. It is favoured, too, in being the seat of educational establishments of the first order. Among these is Morison's Academy, endowed by the late Thomas Morison, builder, Edinburgh, who bequeathed about £20,000 for this purpose. Out of this sum his trustees purchased the site on which the academy has been erected. It is intended to give a complete education to the sons and daughters of the middle classes—the departments being separate. It is conducted by a rector and a staff of assistants, and has attracted pupils from all parts of the kingdom. The trustees purchased St. Margaret's College as a residence for the rector and for the accommodation of boarders. Taylor's Institution was founded and endowed by William Taylor, of Cornton, who died in 1841, and left his whole fortune "for educating the children of the poor in the most useful branches of education, and for the formation of a suitable library, with lectures on such branches of science as may interest the community at large, and tend to elevate their intellectual character and promote their temporal happiness." For these purposes a suitable building, with a house for the master, has been erected at the east end of the town. In 1867 the Strathearn Hydropathic Establishment was erected, at a cost of nearly £30,000. It occupies a splendid site in front of the Knock, and overlooks an extensive landscape of rich and varied beauty. Water of the finest quality is supplied at the rate of 20,000 gallons per day. The internal arrangements for the comfort and convenience of the visitors are admirable, and the success of the Institution, under the able management of Dr. Meikle, has exceeded expectation. There is accommodation for about 200 visitors.

The principal branches of trade carried on here are the manufacture of fabrics in woollen, tanning and grain mills. The mills engaged in the manufacture of tartans belong to Mr. Mitchell, who employs a considerable number of hands. The old Drummond Arms, in which Prince Charles Edward Stuart passed a night in 1745, was recently feued by the trustees of the late Lady Willoughby d'Eresby to the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and premises for the bank and a large hotel have been erected. The buildings are among the most handsome in the town, and add greatly to the appearance of the principal square, in which they are erected. In the town are five branch banks and a Savings Bank, and two newspapers are published here—the "Strathearn Herald" and the "Crieff Journal." A sheriff's small debt court is held quarterly, on the first Saturday in February, May, August and November. The places of worship are the East and West Parish Churches, a Free Church, and others for United Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Roman Catholics and Baptists. The weekly market is held on Tuesday, and fairs are held on the first Tuesday of each month. The parish of Crieff contains 20,385 acres. The population in 1871 was returned at 4,598.

The parish of MONZIE, which is about three miles north-east of Crieff, lies on the south side of the Grampians. It is a mountainous district, not above one-third part being arable—the remainder heath and moss. It is watered by the Almond, the Keltie and the Shaggy, upon which are several romantic cascades. The only inhabited portions of the district are two valleys, separated from each other by a ridge of hills four miles broad. The church is a modern building. Acreage, 21,487; population in 1871, 803.

FOWLIS WESTER is a large parish in the district of Strathearn, and lying north-east of Crieff. It is intersected by the river Almond, which here flows eastward to the Tay. Acreage, 22,808; population, 1,161.

MADDERTY is a small parish about five miles east from Crieff. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Here are an Established church, a Free church and a public school. Acreage, 4,861; population, 523.

DOUNE, DEANSTON AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

DOUNE is a respectable and thriving village in the parish of Kilmadock and district of Monteith, 44 miles W.N.W. from Edinburgh, 1½ S.W. from Perth, 19 S. from Crieff, 9 N.W. from Stirling, 8 S.E. from Callander, 4 N. from Thornhill, and the same distance W. from Dunblane. The Dunblane, Doune and Callander Branch of the Caledonian railway possesses a station here. The town occupies a pleasant situation on the north bank of the Teith, and consists principally of three streets, radiating from a centre, where the market cross stands. Doune was formerly noted for its manufacture of Highland pistols, which has long become extinct. The cotton manufacture is carried on; and there are established in Doune branches of the Union Bank of Scotland and Royal Bank of Scotland.

In 1856 a new parish church was erected; its style is Gothic, with a handsome tower; the interior is ornamented with a beautiful pulpit, particularly worthy of notice. For this public work the parishioners are indebted to the Earl of Moray, the patron and chief heritor of the parish, and owner of Doune Castle, once the family seat of the Earls of Monteith. The ruins of this once noble castle stand in the immediate neighbourhood, upon an elevated peninsula formed by the junction of the Ardoch water with the Teith. To judge from the massiveness and extent of its remains, the castle appears to have belonged to that first-rate order of Scottish fortresses of which those of Edinburgh, Stirling and Dumbarton afford entire specimens. There still remains one huge square building, the walls of which are forty feet high, and ten feet thick, with a tower which rises above the rest to the height of eighty feet, ascending proudly over the lofty trees that encompass the place, and overlooking a country eminent in beauty and fertility. The old bridge which crosses the Teith a little above the Castle was erected by Robert Spital, a native of Stirling, who had amassed a fortune as tailor to Princess Margaret of England, widow of James IV. This bridge was widened by three feet in 1866. The Princess Margaret was a frequent inhabitant of Doune Castle, and the unfortunate Mary, Queen of Scots, is said also to have resided some time in it. The parish of Kilmadock comprises a district of great fertility; the land upon the banks of the Forth and Teith produces abundant crops of every description of grain. From the level margin of the former river the ground rises gradually to the Grampian mountains, which form the northern boundary of the parish; the face of the country here is delightful, with many romantic features. A short distance from Doune is the small village of DEANSTON, mainly supported by the cotton manufactures before mentioned. Fairs are held in Doune on the second Wednesday in May, the last Wednesday in July, the first Tuesday and Wednesday and the fourth Wednesday in November. The acreage of the parish of Kilmadock is 24,521. The population in 1871 numbered 3,170; and that of Doune 1,262.

AND THE PARISH OF RHYND.

DUNBARNY (or Dumbarny) parish is situated in the south-eastern part of the county, occupying a rich portion of Strathearn district. The church of Dunbarny is close by the village of BRIDGE OF EARN, which latter is three miles and a half from Perth. Since the latter village has become populous and extensive, it has assumed the character of the capital of the district, while the name of the parish has sunk into comparative insignificance. Pitkeathly spring, near the Bridge of Earn, has been long celebrated for affording relief to those afflicted with gravel, scurvy, &c.; the scenery around is beautiful and romantic. The great north road passes through the district towards Perth; and the Edinburgh and Northern Railway includes in its route Bridge of Earn, where a station is established. The parish of Dunbarny occupies the south-eastern part of Perthshire, and a pleasant part of Strathearn, north from Dron. It is bounded by the hill of Mordon (or Moncreiffe) on the north, and on the west by Forgandenny. It is intersected by the river Earn in various windings; the flat and rising grounds being adorned with plantations, avenues, and refreshing hedge-rows. The Earn is crossed in this parish by a handsome bridge, giving its name to the village above mentioned. This parish, which embraces an area of 4,060 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 913.

RHYND is a small parish about two miles from Bridge of Earn, situated at the confluence of the Tay and Earn, four miles in length, and one mile in breadth, bounded on the west by the parishes of Dunbarny and Perth, on the north and east by Kinfauns and St. Madres, from which it is separated by the Tay, and on the south by the parish of Abernethy, from which it is separated by the Earn. The Earl of Wemyss is chief landowner. The castle of Elcho, now in ruins, was originally of great strength. The church is situated at the south end of the parish. There is also a parochial school. This parish in 1871 contained a population of 327, and an area of 2,457 acres.

POST OFFICE, BRIDGE OF EARN, Robert Anderson, Post Master.—Letters from Perth and the North and West arrive at ten minutes before seven morning, and twenty minutes past four evening; and are despatched at half-past eight morning and half-past six evening. Letters from Edinburgh, Glasgow and the South arrive at twenty minutes before nine morning, ten minutes before one noon and ten minutes before seven evening; and are despatched at ten minutes before seven and half-past eight morning, twenty-five minutes before one noon, and ten minutes past four and half-past six evening.

DUNBLANE,

A burgh by the adoption of Police (Scotland) Act, is a small ancient city, in the parish of its name, and is the capital of the western district of Perthshire, 41 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 33 N.E. from Glasgow, 28 S.W. from Perth, 11 from Callander, and 3 from Doune, charmingly situated on the banks of the river Allan, which flows through a great part of the parish, and affords excellent sport to the angler, there being a good supply of trout, besides salmon and grilse in their season. Dunblane is much resorted to in the summer season as a watering place, there being an excellent mineral spring on the property of the Hon. Captain Arthur H. Drummond, of Cromlix, in the vicinity of the town. This spring has been acquired by the Dunblane Hydropathic Company Limited, who are building a large establishment capable of accommodating 200 visitors. The Scottish Central Section of the Caledonian Railway passes through and has a station in the town, and the Dunblane, Doune and Callander branch commences here. Dunblane was formerly the see of a bishop founded by David I., and the great object of attraction in the present day is what was once the Cathedral, the choir of which is now the parish church, all the other parts of the edifice being in a state of decay. It stands on an eminence on the eastern bank of the Allan, overlooking the town, and is a large Gothic structure, with a steeple of modern erection, one hundred and twenty feet in height. That part of the town which adjoins the church, from its being composed chiefly of old dignified looking houses, exhibits the appearance of what is termed the "Close," or the precinct of the Cathedral. The good and learned Leighton, whose fame is in all the churches, was at one time Bishop of Dunblane, and bequeathed his valuable library to the clergy of the diocese. The books are kept in a suitable building called the Leightonian Library, to which the public have access on easy terms.

Dunblane is a place of limited trade, and not conspicuous as one of manufactures. Worsted spinning is carried on very extensively by Messrs. Alexander Wilson & Co. at their mills, Springbank, which gives employment to a great number of the inhabitants. There is also a small mill for the manufacture of woollen cloth, and others for wool spinning in the parish, and a few of the inhabitants are employed in handloom weaving. In the High street are branches of the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland. This place is the residence of a sheriff substitute and other functionaries. A sheriff court for the recovery of small debts and for ordinary business is held every Wednesday, and justice of peace courts occasionally. The court-house and prison are modern buildings, convenient to their respective purposes. The places of worship are the parish church (before noticed), a Free church, an United Presbyterian and a handsome Episcopal chapel. There are three public schools—an infants' school, and one belonging to the Episcopal church. The country to the south of the town is very beautiful, and is finely ornamented with plantations. The ride from Dunblane to Stirling is much and justly admired. The vale of Strathallan, through which flows the river Allan, lies to the north and east of the town. The fields on the banks of the river are fertile, but as the grounds approach the hills they are of a moorish character, although excellently adapted for the purpose of pasture, the dairy produce of this district being in high repute. At the lower end of the town is the romantic walk of Kippenross, near to the end of which is a plane tree, supposed to be the largest in Scotland, the circumference of the trunk in the smallest part being nearly twenty feet; where the branches separate, fully-twenty-seven feet, and close to the ground forty-two feet seven inches. The height of the tree is a hundred feet, and has attained the age, it is said, of four hundred and seventy years. About half-way between Dunblane and the Bridge of Allan is Keir House, the residence of Sir William Stirling Maxwell, Bart., M.P. The grounds are laid out with great taste, and contains fine specimens of forest trees and ornamental flower gardens. They are kindly thrown open to visitors from two to six on Friday.

A few miles from the town is Sheriffmuir, on which a severe conflict took place in November, 1715, between the royal forces, under the Duke of Argyle, and the rebel army, commanded by the Earl of Mar. Here on the summit of the hill are some large stones enclosed by iron rails, said to be placed where the standard was erected. Prince Charles arrived at Dunblane on the 11th of September, 1745, on his way to the low country, and remained a night at the house of the Laird of Balhaldie. The room in which the prince held his levee, on the morning of his departure, is courteously shown to the enquiring visitor. Dunblane bestows the title of viscount on the Duke of Leeds. There was formerly a market held here and numerous fairs, but they have all fallen into disuse. Dunblane parish has an area of 18,543 acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 2,765; and the village numbered 1,921.

Post Office, DUNBLANE, Margaret Dawson, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive at half-past seven morning, and are despatched at twenty minutes past four afternoon and ten minutes past eight evening. Letters from the North arrive at ten minutes before five and twenty minutes past eight evening, and are despatched at seven morning and ten minutes before ten night. Letters from Killin, Lochearnhead, Strathyre, &c. arrive twenty minutes past four afternoon, and are despatched at five minutes before nine morning.

DUNKELD,

WITH THE PARISHES OF CAPUTH, DOWALLY, LITTLE DUNKELD, AND VILLAGES OF BIRNAM, BUTTERSTONE, DALGUISE, DRUMOUR, GILLYBURN, MEIKLEOUR, MEIKLE TROCHRY, MURTHLY, SPITTALFIELD, INVER, STRATHBRAAN, AND TORWOOD.

DUNKELD is a small but interesting and handsome town and burgh of barony, partly in the united parishes of Dunkeld and Dowally, and partly in that of Caputh; 57 miles N.N.W. from Edinburgh, by rail 60 miles, 24 E. from Keumore, 15 N.N.W. from Perth, and 12 W. from Blairgowrie; delightfully situated in the bosom of an amphitheatre of hills, at the spot where the highlands and lowlands appear to meet, and where the Tay first escapes from mountain fastnesses to the smiling land to which it contributes so much additional fertility and beauty. The town is of great antiquity, and was the capital of ancient Caledonia. The monastery of the Culdees is noticed so early as 729, and is recorded to have been built by Constantine, third king of the Picts. David I. in 1127, converted it into a bishopric. The first bishop of this see whose name appears prominently in history, is the heroic William Sinclair, who assumed the mitre in 1312. He built the choir, succeeding bishops building other portions until it was finished in 1460. It is stated that in 1560 it was destroyed and left a ruin by an order from the Privy Council of Scotland. In 1762 the government gave £300 towards the restoration of the choir, and a further sum of £1,000 in 1815, to which the Duke of Athole added £5,000, for the purpose of converting it into a Parish church. The other parts of the cathedral have been abandoned to the operations of time and the seasons, and have sunk into a state of dilapidation. In the early part of the sixteenth century the see of Dunkeld was occupied by the learned Gavin Douglas, a younger son of the Earl of Angus. The situation of the cathedral, in the midst of a fine grove on the left bank of the Tay, must highly interest the contemplative stranger. There is also a Free church, a neat and substantial edifice, erected in 1874, on the site of the old one, with tower and spire, which cost upwards of £2,000. The interior is ornamented by a handsome stained glass window in memory of the Earl of Dalhousie, the whole of the funds being raised by public subscription. The scenery which surrounds Dunkeld has long been the subject of admiration. Nature has been bountiful to this district, and her favours were duly appreciated and skilfully assisted by the late noble proprietor, the Duke of Athole, who conducted his operations and embellishments with such consumate taste as to produce one of the most beautiful and picturesque retreats to be found in Scotland, and which has long been the resort of tourists and visitors. Excellent accommodation is furnished by two very extensive and superior hotels, the "Duke of Athole Arms" and the "Royal Hotel." The Bridge of Tay, at this place, is a magnificent structure of seven arches, the total span of which is 685 feet, its breadth 27 feet, and its greatest height from the foundation 54 feet. Its erection was commenced in 1805, and completed in 1809, at a cost of upwards of £30,000; £5,000 of which was contributed by government, and the remainder disbursed by the late public spirited nobleman. The bridge was constructed chiefly on dry land, and the river afterwards turned to flow through its finely formed arches. The view from this bridge is, in every direction, remarkably fine. Near the town is a seat of the noble family of Athole, the gardens belonging to which, the cascades, the extensive pleasure grounds, and the lovely scenery, are most attractive objects; among these, Ossian's Hall, the rumbling bridge, and several falls of the river Bran, are pointed out to the visitor. In these grounds are two very fine trees called "the mother larches," being the first grown in Britain; they were planted in 1737, and are 100 feet high; one of them measures 15 feet in circumference at three feet from the ground. A very handsome fountain was erected in 1866 by the inhabitants and a few friends, as a mark of respect and esteem to George Augustus Frederick John, sixth Duke of Athole, who died in 1864. The manufacture of linen goods was formerly the staple trade of Dunkeld, but has now become extinct. Productive slate quarries are worked by Mr. John Robertson, of Dunkeld. There are branches of the three following banking establishments settled here, namely, the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland. Dunkeld is a burgh of barony, and as such is governed by a baron bailie, who is appointed by the Duke of Athole. A sheriff small debt court is held on the third Wednesday of April, August and December, for the recovery of sums not exceeding £12; and a justice of peace court for the recovery of sums not exceeding £5, and for granting publicans' certificates, game dealers' licenses, &c. James VI. made a grant for erecting a grammar school, called the Royal School of Dunkeld, which still exists. There is also a school for the education of females, erected by the Duchess of Athole in 1853, at a cost of £1,200, which is a handsome building situated in the Market place. A new City Hall is now in course of erection in Athole street. It is a neat stone building, furnished with a gallery, and capable of accommodating 350 persons. The funds were raised by the assistance of the present Duke of Athole, the gentry in the neighbourhood, and the inhabitants. The weekly market is held on Saturday, and the fairs on the 14th of February, 5th of April, and the 20th of June; should any of these fall on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, the fairs take place of the following Tuesday; another is held on the second Tuesday in November. Population in 1871, 783.

CAPUTH is an extensive parish and small village, five miles east from Dunkeld, lying on the banks of the River Tay. Here is an Established church. BUTTERSTONE, SPITTALFIELD and MEIKLEOUR are small villages in this parish, from three to five and a half miles distant. Acreage of parish, 19,489; population, 2,142.

DOWALLY is a large parish, situated about five miles from Dunkeld. The present church was erected in 1818, nearly on the site of the one erected by Bishop Brown. A number of old stones have been made use of in erecting the new building, amongst which is one bearing the arms of Bishop Brown, the original founder; a tombstone to the memory of one of the Dalguise family; and a stone in the shape of a bell. DRUMOUR and STRATHBRAAN are small villages in this parish, situated from one to four miles distant.

LITTLE DUNKELD, contrary to its distinctive appellative, is an extensive parish, lying on the west or right bank of the Tay, opposite to Dunkeld above described. The village is situated at the south end of the bridge which carries the road across to Dunkeld. The parish forms a kind of irregular triangle, and is disposed by nature into three districts—the district of MURTHLY, extending from Kinclaven to the village of INVER. DALGUISE, GILLYBURN, INVER, MEIKLE TROCHRY, MURTHLY and TORWOOD are small villages in the parish of Little Dunkeld, situate from one to six miles distant. Murthly Castle, in this neighbourhood, is a fine structure in the Elizabethan style of architecture. At Murthly is situated the Perth District Lunatic Asylum. It is a fine square building, surrounded by beautiful grounds, which are kept in order by the patients. Murthly and Dalguise are stations on the Highland Railway. The surface of this district is beautifully varied, its soil fertile, and generally well-enclosed and cultivated; it is adorned by Murthly Castle, the seat of the Steuarts of Grandtulty, and by Birnam Hill, rendered classical by Shakspere, and rising in rude magnificence from the edge of the river. The parish is traversed by the military road from Perth to Inverness.

BIRNAM is a small village in the parish of Little Dunkeld, and situated about three quarters of a mile from Dunkeld on the opposite side of the river Tay. The village has a very clean appearance, and contains several large and substantial buildings, the ground floors being occupied by various tradesmen, and the upper stories as dwellings. The Highland Railway Station (Dunkeld) is situated here. The Birnam Highland Games, which are held on the last Thursday in August, attract large numbers of spectators. The Birnam Hotel, of which Mr. John B. Pople is the proprietor, is a building in the Saxon-Gothic style, surrounded with fine pleasure grounds and contains a public hall, perhaps one of the finest in the Kingdom. The Episcopal Church (St. Mary's) is a handsome building, built in the Gothic style of architecture, with tower and bell. The second district of Little Dunkeld extends from Inver, along the banks of the Tay to Grandtully, a space of ten miles; here the fields are level, and the whole has the appearance of an almost continued series of beautiful gardens. The third division, which is separated from the second by a hilly tract of considerable elevation, is a valley of about nine miles in length; the soil is generally of a fertile clay or loam, grey freestone, and slate. The mineral productions that have been hitherto discovered in the parish are confined to lead ore and argillaceous earth. The productive slate quarries of Birnam are worked by Messrs. Harris Brothers. The population of the village in 1871, was 530.

DUNNING,

FORTEVIOT, FORGANDENNY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUNNING is a rather extensive parish, containing a neat village of its name, the latter nine miles S.W. from Perth, and five E. from Auchterarder; situate near the centre of the district, on the banks of the Dunning water (a tributary of the Earn), half a mile north of the base of the Ochill range of hills, and about two miles from the river Earn. The village, which contains a number of good houses, is under the control of a baron bailie. The places of worship are the parish and Free churches, and United Presbyterian and Episcopalian chapels. The steeple of the parish church is of very ancient date, and is supposed to be of Pictish origin. A branch of the Union Bank of Scotland is established in the village. This place was destroyed by fire by the Earl of Mar's army, on the retreat from Sheriffmuir to Perth. A thorn, planted at that time in the centre of the ruins, is still to be seen, and from its shape size and appearance at once attracts the stranger's attention. It is recorded that at the conflagration of the village, only one house escaped (which is still standing), and that by an ingenious device on the part of its owner, a female, who, while the rest of the cottages were in flames, threw parcels of wet straw and refuse of flax on the fire within the house, which raised such a smoke round this particular dwelling, that, believing it to be in a fair way of demolition, the soldiers did not molest it. A corn market is held every Wednesday. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in April, on the 20th of June, and on the Monday before the first Tuesday in October. The parish comprises 14,855 acres, and contained in 1871 a population of 1,832.

FORTEVIOT is a parish in the district of Strathearn and the greater portion in the vale of Earn; the river of that name passing through it. The middle portion is beautifully wooded and enclosed, and is intersected by the May, which joins the Earn nearly opposite Dupplin Castle. The village of Forteviot, which is situated on the right bank of the last-named stream, is an ancient capital of the Pictish kingdom, but nothing now remains to mark a royal seat. At Bankhead, near Dupplin Castle, an ancient cross may be seen, and one also on the opposite height of Dromochy, both of which are supposed to mark the approaches to Hally Hill, where, in the time of Charles I., vestiges of a palace were in existence. It was on the heights here that the battle of Dupplin was fought. The river May before mentioned, winds through the verdant knolls of the Ochils, and thence through the picturesque grounds of the Invermay, flowing on and forming several beautiful falls, until it becomes lost for a time in the intricate course of the Hummel Bummel, a cataract at Mackarcey Linn, that tumbles for more than thirty feet in a perpendicular fall, into a romantic glen. About three hundred yards from the village is a station belonging to the Scottish Central Railway. Acreage of the parish 7,785; population, 567.

FORGANDENNY is a parish and a village, the latter about four miles south from Perth, five miles east from Dunning, and three west Bridge of Earn. The village is very small, and contains an Established and a Free church, and a parochial school. There is a station on the Caledonian line, about one mile distant. Acreage, 8,946; population, 632.

ERROL,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ABERNYTE, INCHTURE, KILSPINDIE, KINNAIRD, LONGFORGAN, SAINT MADOES, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ERROL is a parish in the carse of Gowrie, 5½ miles in length and nearly three in breadth, stretching across the carse from the foot of the hill to the banks of the Tay. The soil is rich and fertile and under most productive tillage; it is also highly favourable to the growth of fruit trees. The country is intersected with small tracts of water called "pows," collected chiefly from the trenches opened for draining the grounds. As the tide and current in the Tay were making great encroachments, the proprietors of the land found it necessary to build strong walls to arrest their usurpation. It is recorded that this district receives the name of Errol, signifying an eastern landmark, from the circumstance of the family of Hay, who, having fought gallantly at Luncarty, received for their services from the king a gift of as much land in the carse of Gowrie as a hawk flew over. Be this account correct or merely a traditionary legend, it is certain that the noble family of Hay takes the title of Earl of Errol from the appellation of the parish. The small village named after it is 10 miles E. of Perth, occupying a beautiful situation on a rising ground, embowered in trees, commanding a prospect of the Tay and Carse almost as far east as Dundee. A rivulet flows past to the Tay, and forms a small harbour at its mouth; and about a mile from the village is a station on the Caledonian Railway. The village is gas-lighted. The parish church is a very handsome building on a commanding site; the tower may be seen at a considerable distance; there is also a substantial and capacious Free church, and one for United Presbyterians. Acreage of the parish 9,507; population in 1871, 2,504, the village numbering 918.

FORTINGAL,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF KINLOCH-RANNOCH AND KELTNEY BURN.

FORTINGAL is a parish in the district of Breadalbane. The village, a small one, is 84 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 42 N.W from Perth, 15½ N.N.E. from Killin, 5½ S.W. from Dull, and 5 W. from Kenmore, situated on the left bank of the river Lyon, about three miles from its junction with the Tay. The parish lies in the midst of the Grampians, and is only useful for sheep pasture. Including the abolished parish of Kilchonan, it extends 37 miles in length by 17 in breadth, occupying a large tract of Highland territory in the north-west part of the county. The district abounds in lakes, rivers, and woods; the chief of the former being Loch Rannoch, about 11 miles in length, whose banks are finely wooded. A yew tree in the burial ground is said to be upwards of 2,500 years old. There are the remains of a Roman camp on the Hough of Fortingal. Not far from the southern bank of the lake are the barracks called GEORGETOWN. In this district rises the Schehallion, one of the highest mountains in Scotland, where Dr. Maskelyne, astronomer royal, some years ago made his observations on the powers of attraction. This parish is so wild and mountainous that prior to the year 1745 the civil power could not reach it. It was the receptacle of the freebooters, who laid the country under that species of contribution so well known by the name of "black mail." The inhabitants are now steady and industrious. The small villages of KINLOCH-RANNOCH and KELTNEY BURN are also in this parish. In the former has been erected by subscription a handsome granite monument in memory of the Gælic poet, Dugald Buchanan. Fairs are also held in the village of Fortingal in August and December, and in the village of Kinloch-Rannoch on the second Tuesday in August and last Tuesday of October. Acreage of Fortingal parish, 196,683; population in 1871, 1,763.

KENMORE,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF ACHARN.

THE parish of KENMORE lies in the Highland district of Breadalbane, surrounding the large and beautiful lake of Loch Tay, which is 16 miles in length, varying from one to two in breadth. The waters of the lake, which seldom or never freeze, abound with salmon and other fish. The clean little village of Kenmore, with its kirk and white cottages, occupies an eminence at the north-east end of the loch, close by the point where it opens into a river, over which is thrown a handsome bridge of five arches. The village is 80 miles N.N.W. from Edinburgh, 40 N.W. from Perth, 24 W. from Dunkeld, 16 N.E. from Killin, and 5 E. from Fortingal. In the vale below the village are the park and castle of Taymouth, the magnificent seat of the Earl of Breadalbane. The mansion, some years since, was much enlarged and improved, and it now ranks amongst the most elegant modern castellated mansions in Scotland. This is a favourite point in a tour of the highlands, and hence is much visited in summer. The district comprises objects both sublime and beautiful; amongst the former is the majestic mountain, Ben Lawers, which rises on the north-east side of the loch to the height of 3,945 feet. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in March and on the 2nd of November (both old style), and the 28th of June, the 26th of July, the 17th of September, and the 24th of December. The parish contains an area of 67,196 acres, and in 1871 a population of 1,615.

ACHARN is a small village in Kenmore parish, situated about two miles from the village of Kenmore, on the east side of Loch Tay. Near the village, in a woody glen, are the celebrated Falls of Acharn. The Breadalbane family have built a grotto (called the "Hermitage"), opposite to the greatest fall, where the water suddenly precipitates itself over the projecting rock, a distance of about 250 feet

KILLIN,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF CLIFTON.

KILLIN is a mountainous and extensive parish in the Highland district of Breadalbane; the village, a small one, is 74 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 40 N.N.W. from Stirling, 27 W. by N. from Crieff, 22½ N. from Callander, 16 S.W. from Kenmore, and 8 from Loch Earn Head, occupying a delightful and picturesque situation at the west end of the celebrated Loch Tay, and near the confluence of the rivers Lochy and Dochart with the waters of the lake. The Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway has a station about four miles distant. This line is one of the finest in Scotland for grandeur of scenery. Anglers residing at the hotel have the privilege, under certain conditions, of fishing in the Loch. On a small island, formed by two branches of the river, and much in the shape of a coffin, is the burial place of the M'Nab clan. On one of the trees of the island may be seen a branch, which, severed from its parent stem by a storm in February, 1806, attached itself to a neighbouring tree, and is now growing with its branches downwards. A small eminence in the neighbourhood of Killin is pointed out as the place of sepulture of the famed highland hero, Fingal. The village is noted for the picturesque beauty of its situation, and, like Kenmore, is a favourable point of tour of the central Highlands. Besides Killin there is another village in the western part of the parish, called CLIFTON. To view the scenery of this district to advantage, the traveller is advised to take the road on the south-east side of the lake; and in passing down its banks it is worth while to stop a little at a woody glen, where the family of Breadalbane have built a grotto opposite to a cascade, which is very well deserving of attention. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in January, the 5th and 12th of May, the Friday before Doune first of November fair, and the first Tuesday in November (old style). Acreage of Killin parish, 96,926; population in 1871, 1,856.

KINCARDINE,

WITH THE PARISHES OF TULLIALLAN AND CULROSS.

KINCARDINE (or Kincardine-on-Forth) is a sea-port town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Tulliallan, 22 miles s. from Perth, 15 w. from North Queensferry, 10 w. from Dunfermline, six w. from Torryburn, and five N. from Alloa; situated in the southern detached part of the county, on the north bank of the Frith of Forth. At one time this place was called West Pans, from the salt works established in it, but these have long ceased to exist. There are two banking establishments here—the one a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland, the other the Commercial Bank of Scotland. There are rope, canvas and sail cloth, and worsted and woollen manufactories. There is a commodious harbour and an excellent quay, which, together with the good anchorage ground on the Forth, renders this haven an eligible refuge for vessels in distress; the harbour will admit vessels of from three hundred to four hundred tons burthen. The town is irregularly built; there are some good houses, but the streets are narrow, and the trade has considerably decreased of late years. The church, erected some years ago, is a very handsome and ornamental structure; the other places of worship are a Free church, and United Presbyterian church. The old church remains standing in the burial ground, and is an interesting ruin—the steeple, however, being perfect. The principal seat in the district is Tulliallan Castle, from which an extensive view of the surrounding country is commanded. A fair is held in Kincardine on the last Friday in July (old style. The parish of Tulliallan contains 3,586 acres. The population in 1871 was 2,184; the town of Kincardine numbering 1,983.

CULROSS is an ancient town and representative burgh in the parish of its name, four miles from Kincardine, situated partly on the acclivity of a hill rising from the Forth, the principal street running north from the shore. An extensive traffic in salt and coal was at one time carried on here, and one hundred and seventy foreign vessels have been at one time in the roads. The Earl of Dundonald erected some very extensive works for extracting tar, naphtha and volatile salt from coal, but the speculation proving unproductive it was abandoned. Culross was erected into a Royal burgh by James VI. in 1588; it has a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and councillors. It unites with Stirling, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline in returning one member to parliament. The town and its vicinity possess many objects of antiquity. In 1217 a monastery was founded on the rising ground behind the town by Malcolm, Thane of Fife; considerable remains of this structure are yet extant. On the north side was the abbey church, which had a tower in the centre; the latter is still entire, as is also a part of the church, which is now used for public service. In a recess of a mausoleum, erected in 1642 in honour of Sir George Bruce, are recumbent figures of Sir George and his lady, in beautiful white marble, and along a low settle are arranged their eight children in a kneeling posture. To the west of the town, on the bank of the Forth, is the ruin of Dunmarle (the castle near the sea), an ancient stronghold of the Macleans, and according to tradition the scene of the murder of Lady Macduff and her children. The present house of Dunmarle is a handsome modern edifice, which owes its striking castellated appearance to the late Mrs. Sharp Erskine, who also erected in the grounds a beautiful mortuary chapel, within which she is interred. There is a museum in the house, wherein are some beautiful paintings, rare old china and other articles of virtu, to which, and the extensive grounds, the public are admitted on certain days of the week. Near the abbey church is a school, endowed by the late Patrick Geddes, Esq., at which twenty children receive free education. The building having been too small, the late Miss Davidson, of the Park, erected a very handsome school, at a cost of £1,500, and presented it to the trustees. There is also a public school within the burgh. The acreage of Culross parish is 7,584. The population of the burgh in 1871 amounted to 467, and the parish 1,354.

KIRKMICHAEL,

WITH BALLINTUIM AND SPITTAL OF GLENSHEE.

KIRKMICHAEL is an extensive parish, in the north-eastern corner of the county, adjoining Aberdeenshire on the north, and the county of Forfar on the east; it is seventeen miles in length, and from six to seven in breadth. The parish comprises the greater part of Strathardle, and is intersected by the river Ardle, along the left bank of which an excellent road leads from Pitlochry to Blairgowrie. Ardley Grave, near Dirnanean, nine feet in length, has been reverently preserved, and handed down to posterity, favouring the supposition that this part of the country was inhabited by a race of Fingalians. From the Druidical remains in the parish, it is supposed that Strathardle was the residence of an arch druid; of these relics the principal are, a rocking stone near Dalrulgion, a supposed Druidical altar near Balverran, and numerous circles and cairns. A military way from Coupar Angus to Fort George, traverses the northern part of the parish, by the Spittal of Glenshee. The southern part of the district is intersected by the Ardle, which is crossed by a stone bridge of two arches. In the Strathardle portion of the parish stands the village and kirk, 72 miles N. from Edinburgh, 29 N. from Perth, 13 E. from Pitlochry, and 14 N. W. from Blairgowrie. There is a Free church which will seat five hundred persons, and a constabulary station in the village. The acreage of Kirkmichael parish is 57,283; and the population 965.

SPITTAL of GLENSHEE is a scattered district in the parish of Kirkmichael, fourteen miles north from the latter place, and the same distance east from Blairgowrie. There is an Established church here. At CRAY, in this district, is a handsome Free church and school.

BALLINTUIM is a small village in the parish of Kirkmichael. It is three miles east from Kirkmichael, and eleven miles north from Blairgowrie. The scenery around is very charming and interesting. There is a Free Church school in the village.

POST OFFICE, KIRKMICHAEL, James Robertson, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Pitlochry) at twenty minutes before two afternoon, and are despatched at half-past two afternoon. Letters from Blairgowrie arrive at a quarter-past one afternoon, and are despatched at ten minutes to three afternoon.

MEIGLE AND ALYTH JUNCTION.

MEIGLE is a parish in the district of Strathmore—the village or small town, an ancient one, and the seat of a presbytery, is 61 miles N. from Edinburgh, 18 N. by E. from Perth, 13½ N.N.W. from Dundee, 9 S.S.W. from Kirriemuir, 7½ W. from Glamis, 6 E. from Coupar-Angus, and 4 S. from Alyth; pleasantly situated on the bank of the Isla, and is a station on the Caledonian line. A branch from Meigle to Alyth also passes close to Meigle village. The parish is four miles and a half in length, and two in breadth, is fertile and well cultivated, and, besides the Isla, is watered by the Dean, which is the northern boundary of the district. There are some beautiful seats in this part of the country, particularly Belmont Castle, the gardens and fine plantations of which render it the most delightful residence in all Strathmore. In one of the enclosures is pointed out a tumulus, where, it is said the murderous Macbeth was deprived of his usurped power and his life in his fatal encounter with Macduff. A number of stones and monuments, supposed to be of Pictish origin, are also to be seen in the vicinity. In the churchyard of Meigle are some very old monuments which tradition asserts to be the grave of Queen Vanoria, the unfaithful wife of King Arthur; the figures, which it is said, once delineated the history of Vanoria, are so defaced and dilapidated as to render all attempts at deciphering their meaning a fruitless task. About a mile north-east of the village, at the junction of the Isla and the Dean, are the remains of a Roman camp, called Caraen or Caerden, and noticed by General Roy in his work on the Roman antiquities of Scotland. There are two hotels, viz., the Belmont Arms, situated at Alyth Junction, and Kinloch Arms, in the village of Meigle, both offering good accommodation to visitors, with fishing on the Dean and Isla free. A cattle market is held on the second Monday in every month, and fairs on the last Wednesday in June, and on the last Wednesday in October. Acreage of the parish 3,980; population 745.

POST OFFICE, MEIGLE, James Small, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at twenty-five minutes past twelve midnight and ten minutes past nine morning; and are despatched at a quarter-past two afternoon and six evening.

Letters arrive from Forfar at four afternoon, and from the North at seven evening; and are despatched at eight morning

Letters arrive from Alyth and Glenisla at twenty-five minutes past twelve noon, six evening, and ten minutes before twelve midnight.

METHVEN,

GLENALMOND, MONEYDIE, REDGORTON, TIBBERMUIR, AND ABERDALGIE.

METHVEN is a very neat village and parish, the former six miles west from Perth; situated on the high road to Crieff, from which it is distant eleven miles. It possesses a subscription library, containing 2,210 volumes. There is likewise an agricultural society, who hold two meetings annually. The Perth, Crieff and Methven Railway terminates here. The ancient church of Methven was collegiate, being founded in 1433, for a provost and seven prebendaries, by Walter Stuart, Earl of Athol, one of the youngest sons of Robert II. About a mile from the village is Methven Castle (the residence of William Smythe, Esq.), distinguished in Scottish history as the place where King Robert was defeated by the English army, under the Earl of Pembroke, in 1306. In the parish is also Balgowan, the residence of William Thomson, Esq. But perhaps the most interesting object in the parish is the grave of the celebrated Bessy Bell and Mary Gray, whose beauty and seclusion from the world are the subject of an admired Scottish melody. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and at the linen and jute works of Messrs. R. & W. Moncrieff. Fairs are held on the Monday preceding Amulree market in May and the fourth Thursday in October. Acreage of the parish, 12,911; population in 1871, 2,115; the village numbering 867.

Trinity College, GLENALMOND, on the banks of the Almond, is ten miles from the Perth, and four miles from the Perth, Crieff and Methven Railway. It was projected in the year 1841, and opened in the year 1847, and was founded for the double purpose of supplying a proper collegiate training to candidates for holy orders in the Scottish Episcopal church and of establishing in Scotland a public school, after the general model of those in England. The site on which the college stands was presented by the late George Patten, Esq. of the Cairnies. The funds for the buildings were raised by general subscription throughout England and Scotland. Amongst the most munificent benefactors were the Duke of Buccleuch, the late Sir John Gladstone, Bart., the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, and the Right Rev. Charles Wordsworth, the first warden of the college. The chapel, a building in the decorated style of Gothic architecture, 136 feet long by 52 feet wide, with a height of seventy feet, was erected at a cost of more than £8,000, at the sole expense of the Right Rev. C. Wordsworth. The council consists of sixteen members, namely, the seven Scotch bishops, with two presbyters, and seven laymen. The resident teachers are a warden, a sub-warden a tutor in theology, five other masters, and a medical officer, who is also teacher in chemistry; music is taught by the organist, and drawing by a visiting master.

The parish of MONEYDIE is a small district, comprehending a square of about two miles, bounded by the parish of Auchtergaven on the north, and by that of Redgorton on the east and south. There are, properly speaking, no hills in the parish, but only rising grounds which run northward and southward from the banks of the Shockie. Until lately Moneydie was annexed to the parish of Logiealmond. Acreage, 4,438; population, 244.

REDGORTON parish is about six miles in length by two in breadth, extending along the Tay and Almond; besides which there are the Shockie stream, and several other rivulets, each propelling considerable machinery in the district through which the waters pass. It is bounded on the north by Auchtergaven and Kinclaven, on the east by Scone, on the south and south-west by Tibbermuir and Methven, and on the west by Moneydie. Acreage, 6,077; population, 1,461.

TIBBERMUIR (or Tibbermore) is a parish of about the same extent as Redgorton, and is a manufacturing district, having within it extensive bleach-fields. The ancient castle of Huntingtower is in Tibbermuir, and is worthy of notice as being formerly the seat of the Gowrie family, and the place where James VI. was confined by the Earl of Gowrie and other conspirators in the year 1582. Tibbermuir has given its name to the first battle that was fought between the Marquis of Montrose and the Covenanters, though the conflict occurred more within the parish of Aberdalgie; in this sanguinary engagement the Covenanting forces were totally routed. Acreage, 6,140; population, 1,563.

TRINITY GASK is a parish in the lower part of Strathearn, and comprises the ancient parishes of Kinnel and Wester Gask. It extends several miles along the northern bank of the Earn. The whole of the parish is arable, and well enclosed and planted. Acreage, 5,689; population, 415.

ABERDALGIE, a parish, is washed on the south by the Earn, which here affords excellent fishing. The parish abounds in freestone, and much of the land is under plantation. Dupplin Castle, a seat of the Earl of Kinnoull, is in the parish. Acreage, 4,165; population, 342.

MUTHILL AND ARDOCH,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BRACO AND GREENLOANING.

MUTHILL is an extensive parish lying on the borders of the Highland district, on the right bank of the Earn. The village is 19 miles N. from Stirling, 16 W. from Perth, and three S. from Crieff; and is situate on the great military road from Dunblane to Inverness by Tummel Bridge. About a mile to the westward stands Drummond Castle, the ancient seat of the family of Perth, now the residence of Baroness Willoughby De Eresby; it is finely seated on a rock at the head of the vale of Strathearn, and attracts the attention and admiration of every stranger from the beautiful prospect it commands. There is a church, in ruins, said to have been built in 1419; the tower appears to be of an earlier date, and is doubtless of Pictish origin. A church was erected in 1828. In the churchyard there is a fine monument erected to the memory of the Rev. William Halley, the first Presbyterian minister of the parish; a Free church and an Episcopalian chapel are the other places of worship, and connected with the churches are schools and a joint library. The Crieff Junction Railway passes through the parish, and has a station here. A portion of the industrious classes are employed in weaving for the large manufacturing houses. The principal objects of interest in the parish, particularly to an antiquary, are two Roman camps, one at Strageath, and the other at Ardoch, a parish constituted in 1857, six miles from Muthill, the latter being considered one of the most perfect and interesting in Britain. The area of this camp is an oblong of one hundred and forty yards, by one hundred and twenty-five within the lines; the "general's quarter," which is a regular square of twenty yards each side, rises above the level of the camp, and contains the foundation of a house ten yards by seven. There are two other encampments adjoining, which have a communication with each other. Many years ago, various interesting relics were brought to light from beneath these ancient fortifications, such as Roman spears, helmets, fragments of bridles, and other articles; these lay at the house of Ardoch for a considerable period, but were all carried off by some soldiers in the Duke of Argyle's army after the battle of Sheriffmuir in 1715, and could never be recovered. Muthill parish embraces an area of 21,916 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 1,916. Acreage of Ardoch parish, 21,127; population in 1871, 1,316.

BRACO is a village in the parish of Ardoch; it contains an Established and a Free church, and two public schools. Population in 1871, 343.

GREENLOANING is a small village, also in the parish of Ardoch about one mile distant from Braco; it is a station on the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian line, and contains an United Presbyterian church, and a Public school.

—:o:—

PERTH,

WITH THE PARISHES OF KINFAUNS AND KINNOULL.

PERTH, an ancient and elegant city, royal burgh, seat of a synod and presbytery, and capital of the county to which it gives its name, is 43 miles north from Edinburgh, 61 N.E. from Glasgow, 22 S.W. from Dundee, 15 S. from Dunkeld, and 16 S. from Blairgowrie. The city is situated at the opening of an extensive plain, nearly surrounded by picturesque hills, having in the distance a view of the sublime amphitheatre of the Grampians; and bounded on the north and south by two beautiful meadows, called the North and South Inches, the former containing one hundred acres, the latter seventy two; both ornamented with noble trees, and watered by the Tay, which occasionally overflows them. These Inches are devoted to the use and recreation of the inhabitants. The Tay is one of the finest rivers in the kingdom, and is celebrated for its picturesque scenery, during its whole course, and for the value of the salmon fisheries. It is recorded that when Agricola's army saw this delightful plain and superb river, they exclaimed, as with one voice, Ecce Tiber! Ecce Campus Martius!—Behold the Tiber! Behold the field of Mars! Agricola pitched his camp in the middle of that field, on the spot where the city now stands. At one time the traces of a fortification, called Cromwell's Fort, were visible on the South Inch, but now elegant buildings have been erected on part of the space so occupied. Perth for a long period held the rank of capital of Scotland, was the residence of its kings and nobles, and the seat of its parliaments. It appears that this city also bore the name of St. Johnstone, from its ancient church dedicated to St. John. At the early period when Scots kings succeeded to the Pictish throne, the church and bridge of Perth are supposed to have been consecrated to St. John the Baptist, as the tutelary saint, and consequently obtained the name of St. John's Town, but was not recognised by that name in any of the public documents of the period. Fordun, in his history, remarks that he had found in some ancient writings that the town of St. John, now called Perth, was priorily Bertha, the contraction being Berth or Bert; and as the letters B and P are used in the Gaelic language indiscriminately, it may naturally be presumed that the Highlanders changed the pronunciation of it to Perth; and from this circumstance, it is very probable, the present name of the place was derived; indeed, at the present time, the word Perth is pronounced by the Highlanders Peirt or Peart. The approach to Perth by the Edinburgh road is strikingly picturesque, and the descent to the South Inch terminates in a majestic avenue of trees, extending to the town. At the southern extremity of this avenue stands the extensive general prison of Scotland, built by government in 1812, for the reception of prisoners of war. It was wholly re-built and remodelled in 1842; it was then occupied as a criminal prison, and more extensive buildings erected for the purpose. The city itself is large and well built; the streets are long and spacious, well paved, and gas lighted. At the east end of Marshall place, and forming the extreme south-eastern angle of the city, stands a fine architectural ornament, the water reservoir, designed by the learned and accomplished Dr. Anderson, rector of the academy, and erected under his immediate superintendence; he also devised the scheme for the supply of pure water. In all wells sunk within or near the town the water was strongly impregnated with salts, and consequently ill adapted for culinary purposes or cleanliness; the saline fluid flowing in much faster from the neighbouring high grounds than the soft water from the river. To obviate this, Dr. Anderson devised the plan of excavating a filtering bed, 300 feet long, in the gravel, in the upper end of Friartown Island, which, having a branch of the river flowing on either side, secretes only the water of the Tay, and produces an unlimited quantity of this indispensable element, pure, soft, and limpid at all times and seasons; this is conveyed to the reservoir by means of a suction pipe of great power, below the bed of the principal branch of the river, and thrown up into the tank by two steam engines, each of ten horses' power. The project has been crowned with such complete success that works upon the same principle have been carried into effect in Berlin and Paris. The expense of this noble work is defrayed by an assessment on real rents above a certain mount, while the poor are supplied gratis. From the increase of inhabitants, the extension of the royalty, and numerous villas having been erected in the vicinity, it is found that the supply is inadequate; and application is being at present made to Parliament for powers to extend the present works. At the public baths every description of bath may be used at a very low charge. Opposite the North Inch, and fronting the Tay, is an elegant row of houses called Rose terrace; in the centre are erected the Public Seminaries (noticed hereafter). At the south end of Rose terrace is a handsome range of houses forming a crescent. The range of villas on St. Leonard's bank, skirting the western boundary of the South Inch, at the summit of a gentle elevation, is particularly striking. In addition to these, the whole of the tasteful erections in King street and King's place, Kinnoull street, Athole street, Charlotte place, and Barossa place, have arisen within forty years. Adjoining the North Inch is a bridge which crosses the Tay; th is fine structure, elegant though unadorned, is built in a most substantial manner. Its original narrowness admitted of a footpath on one side only, but in 1871 it was widened at a cost of over £2,000, and it has now a footpath on each side. This bridge is reckoned one of Smeaton's most successful works. More recently many old buildings on the west bank of the river have been demolished, and a new street called Tay street has been formed, extending from the bridge southward to the Dundee railway bridge. Many handsome buildings have already been erected in the street, including a new savings bank, Free church, an elegant building with a handsome spire; offices where the government officials are located, and others. Immediately adjoining the bridge is the parish of Bridge end, leading to Kinnoull Hill, whose summit at the distance of a mile and a half, can be most agreeably ascended by various pleasant walks. The height of the precipice of Kinnoull Hill is above six hundred feet perpendicular, and affords an enchanting prospect. The noble river that flows along the base of this towering cliff, the hills and more concentrated objects in the foreground, and the grandeur of the mountainous prospective, present a panorama rarely excelled. Near the eastern declivity of this remarkable cliffe stands the beautiful castle of Kinfauns, in the centre of the delightful demesne of the same name, so richly embellished by the late Lord Gray. On the eastern bank of the river, about two miles above Perth, stands Scone Palace. The original edifice of historical notoriety, has been replaced by a magnificent pile of building; it is surrounded by extensive pleasure grounds, highly embellished by wood and water. At a short distance from the palace is the chapel, also rebuilt; it is environed by majestic trees, which give an air of pleasing solemnity. Before the reign of King James, the coronation of the kings of Scotland was solemnised in the palace of Scone. The Earl of Mansfield is hereditary keeper of this palace, and proprietor of the spacious park and grounds that surround it. The family resides here for nearly six months in the year.

The public buildings in Perth, especially those of late erection, display much taste and spirit. The most prominent are the County Rooms. This structure, completed after a design by Mr. Smirke, is situated at the extreme end of South street, on the banks of the Tay, and forms a noble object when viewed from the opposite side of the river. The front, which faces the water, is embellished by an elegant portico in the centre, and twelve massive fluted columns, which support a beautiful pediment. From the entrance hall a passage leads off to the county hall, which is a noble room, 68 feet by 40, and occupies the south wing; the centre contains a commodious justiciary hall of semi-circular form, with a spacious gallery. The remainder of the building, on the same floor, includes the sheriff's court and room, his clerk's office, and an arched fire-proof room, where the records of the town are deposited; above is a spacious ball and card room, &c. This building having been found to afford insufficient accommodation, a new and plainer structure was erected in 1866, on the opposite side of South street. Directly in the rear of these buildings is situated the gaol, divided into two prisons; the northern side for felons, and the other for debtors. From the gaoler's house, fronting the interior of the entrance gate, a subterraneous passage leads to the prisoners' bar in the justice hall. The City Hall, at the west end of Saint John's Church, erected by the town council, is one of the most capacious public rooms in Scotland—seating 1,800 persons. It is open for public meetings on the payment of moderate fees.
